Mathematics and Computers in Archaeology J. E. Doran, F. R. Hodson, 1975 This book is for students and practitioners of archaeology It offers an introductory survey of all the applications of mathematical and statistical techniques to their work These applications are increasingly concerned with computerized data classification and quantification and their effect is to reduce the level of uncertainty in the interpretation of the evidence that time and chance have left. Any archaeologist wanting to find out what these new methods have to offer has hitherto been forced to search for information in the specialist handbooks, conference proceedings and review articles of his own and very often of other disciplines. This book brings the information conveniently together so far as it pertains to archaeology and permits an assessment of its relevance and quality. Those who have been daunted by the specialist knowledge apparently demanded will now be able to acquire a thorough grasp of principles and practices. Only an elementary knowledge of mathematics is presumed throughout. Part 1 provides a brief introduction to basic concepts in archaeology and mathematics. Part 2 relates the standard archaeological techniques and procedures to mathematics; it concentrates on numerical approaches best suited to archaeological practices. Part 3 examines various automatic seriation techniques and discusses further work that is coming to play an essential part in the development of archaeology.

Greg White and Tom King provide a handy introduction to students, field novices and land managers on the strategies, methods and logic of contemporary survey work. In addition to providing the legal and historical context for this endeavor, the book provides a heavily illustrated practical guide to conducting a survey to help beginners understand how it works in practice.
