After the Applause Stops Sally Bailey Jasperson, 2017-09-06 Who are you when you no longer do what youve been doing for years It is the big question facing anyone who retires It is something any retiree can relate to and any retiree could have a story here However Im going to limit my stories to those of ballet dancerstop ballet dancersbecause their situation is the most extreme I think They start younger grow up in a rarified atmosphere mostly see only each other and become more and more removed from ordinary life They also succeed which not all dancers do and this leaves them open to a rare experiencethe feeling of complete power and control over a situation as in a performance when everything just happens to click I had such an experience once I still remember it It occurred while I was dancing Tchaikovskys grand pas de deux from the Nutcracker This pas de deux is indeed grand When the orchestra is playing full out and youre dancing full out feeling every muscle in your body doing exactly as you wish you and your partner are responding to each other and the audience is responding to the two of youit is a heady experience There arent too many like it So when its time to retire what is it like to give this up
