Makers of Modern Strategy from Machiavelli to the Nuclear Age Peter Paret, Gordon A. Craig, Felix Gilbert, 2010-10-01 Authoritative and convincing New York Times Book Review The classic reference on the theory and practice of war The essays in this volume analyze war its strategic characteristics and its political and social functions over the past five centuries The diversity of its themes and the broad perspectives applied to them make the book a work of general history as much as a history of the theory and practice of war from the Renaissance to the present Makers of Modern Strategy from Machiavelli to the Nuclear Age takes the first part of its title from an earlier collection of essays that became a classic of historical scholarship Three essays are repinted from the earlier book while four others have been extensively revised The rest twenty two essays are new The subjects addressed range from major theorists and political and military leaders to impersonal forces Machiavelli Clausewitz and Marx and Engels are discussed as are Napoleon Churchill and Mao Other essays trace the interaction of theory and experience over generations the evolution of American strategy for instance or the emergence of revolutionary war in the modern world Still others analyze the strategy of particular conflicts the First and Second World Wars or the relationship between technology policy and war in the nuclear age Whatever its theme each essay places the specifics of military thought and action in their political social and economic environment Together the contributors have produced a book that reinterprets and illuminates war one of the most powerful forces in history and one that cannot be controlled in the future without an understanding of its past

Professional Journal of the United States Army ,1960 Comparative Evaluation Of British And American Strategy In The Southern Campaign Of 1780-1781 Major Joel Woodward, 2014-08-15 This thesis is an analysis and evaluation of the British and American campaign strategies in the Southern Campaign of the War for American Independence After over four and one half years of inconclusive fighting in America the British government developed a plan to restore Royal control of the American South where large numbers of Loyalist Americans were expected to rally in support of the Crown Control of the southern provinces would allow the British army to isolate the North where the rebellion was strongest In May 1780 the American army of the South surrendered to a British army at Charlestowne South Carolina The Americans raised a new army in the South but it too was decisively defeated at Camden South Carolina in August 1780 American prospects in the Southern Department appeared bleak until the arrival of Nathanael Greene in December 1780 Despite a scarcity of resources Greene rebuilt the American southern army and fought an inspired campaign of compound warfare to counter the expanding British control of the Carolinas Lord Cornwallis led the British army on a protracted pursuit of Greene s forces across North Carolina

following the American victory at Cowpens in January 1781 The British army operating well beyond its supply lines was exhausted by the pursuit of Greene Despite winning a narrow tactical victory at Guilford Courthouse in March of 1781 the British force was rendered operationally ineffective Cornwallis withdrew to Virginia where he would ultimately be trapped at Yorktown This thesis demonstrates the application of operational design using the British and American strategies in the Southern Campaign as a historical case study The methodology for this study is based on the linkages between ends ways and means through the elements of operational design Nathanael Greene ultimately succeeded because he implemented a strategy that was designed to match his means to his ends
