

What were some major events in the Native American struggle for equality?

- Native Americans, after centuries of discrimination, are the poorest minority. After losing their lands and being forced onto reservations, they became dependent on the government. Thus, the rates of unemployment, disease, and infant mortality amongst NAs are the highest in the nation.
- To fight for change, the American Indian Movement (AIM) developed. They often used aggressive measures to force the government to act. Specifically, they took over Wounded Knee to symbolically protest the 1890 massacre. After the shootout, the government promised to reevaluate Indian policy.
- Some laws were passed, such as the Indian Education Act, which improve schools. Further, the termination policy, enacted under Eisenhower was, duh, terminated. It had proved to be a dismal failure because it relocating NAs to cities, but did NOT provide them with job skills training, decent jobs, or adequate housing.
- Throughout the 1970s & 1980s, federal courts returned more than 40 million acres of land to native groups.
