ABSTRACT

To end the HIV epidemic as a public health threat, there is urgent need to increase the frequency, depth and intentionality of bidirectional and mutually beneficial collaboration and coordination between the USA and global HIV/AIDS response. The US Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) is uniquely positioned to showcase bidirectional learning between high-income and low-income and middle-income countries (LMICs) in the fight against HIV. For 30 years, HRSA has successfully administered the Ryan White HIV/AIDS Program (RWHAP), the largest federal programme designed specifically for people with HIV in the USA. Further, HRSA has developed and delivered innovative, cost-effective, impactful HIV programmes in over 30 countries as an implementing agency for the US President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR). When PEPFAR was authorised in 2003, HRSA rapidly developed systems and infrastructures to deliver life-saving treatment, initiated workforce development programmes to mitigate health worker shortages, and laid the path for transitioning PEPFAR activities from US-based organisations to sustainable, country-led entities. As global programmes matured, lessons learnt within LMICs gradually began strengthening health services in the USA. To fully optimise synergies between RWHAP and PEPFAR, there is a critical need to build on successful initiatives, harness innovation and technology, and inculcate the spirit of multidirectional learning into global health. HRSA is promoting bidirectional learning between domestic and international HIV programming through documenting, sharing and implementing strategies, lessons learnt, best practices and effective models of care to accelerate achievement of HIV epidemic control and support country-led, sustained responses to public health threats.

INTRODUCTION

The HIV/AIDS pandemic has been one of the world's most serious health and development challenges.¹ Through biomedical and

SUMMARY BOX

- The US Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) has led successful HIV programming for decades in the USA and internationally through the Ryan White HIV/AIDS Program (RWHAP) and the US President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR).
- To optimise synergies between RWHAP and PEPFAR, HRSA is promoting bidirectional learning between domestic and international HIV programming through documenting, sharing and implementing strategies, lessons learnt, best practices and effective models of care in the global HIV/AIDS response.
- HRSA programmes promoting bidirectional learning include the Skills Sharing Programme, which was specifically designed to transfer skills and lessons learnt between service delivery providers at RWHAP clinics and PEPFAR-supported sites, as well as the Strengthening Interprofessional Education to Improve HIV Care Across Africa which supports a web of multidirectional learning networks across the globe.
- HRSA is promoting bidirectional learning between RWHAP and PEPFAR through forums for sharing and collaboration, use of implementation science and optimising strategic health initiatives. These activities leverage lessons learnt related to building on what works, harnessing technology and innovation, and inculcating the spirit of multidirectional learning into global health.

scientific advances and a coordinated global HIV/AIDS response, substantive progress has been made towards ending AIDS as a public health threat by 2030. This progress is due, in part, to efforts made by the USA government to help ensure that vulnerable communities, both domestically and internationally, have access to life-saving HIV services.
