An unusual international and interdisciplinary symposium took place in Vancouver this year. The title itself, "Reinventing Fisheries Management", suggests that the topic would reach beyond present day paradigms as indeed they did. The intention, through appropriate choice of speakers and participants, was to bring together ecology, social sciences, economics, natural resource and population science to focus on innovative scientific tools, novel insights, new scientific and novel forms of management that may lead to sustainable and sustainable fisheries in the 21st century. Over 100 scientists from 12 countries participated.

The reputation of fisheries scientists has recently suffered a serious downturn. Despite our best efforts, fisheries worldwide have become severely depleted and, along with reductions in the size of fish harvested, fish communities have shifted towards small, rapidly growing species.

These symptoms have been accompanied by a crisis of fisheries confidence that has not only been largely unaddressed but by our most advanced management methods, but also the biggest about-face in our social and economic consequences. Such questions have even occurred in developed nations like Canada, that previously leads the world in numbers of top-rate fisheries scientists per capita.

Confidence in conventional fisheries science has been eroded at the very time when we need it most.

Confidence in conventional fisheries science has been eroded at the very time when we need it most of any and the difficulty to make fish harvest sustainable in face of the uncertainty because the demand for fish and wealth that the human population of the coming century will bring.

Thus, fisheries science is more in a state of flux. Many feel that

Reinventing Fisheries Management:

Reinventing Fisheries Management T.J. Pitcher,P. Hart,D. Pauly,2012-12-06 Judged by a dismaying track record and a consequent downturn in the reputation of fisheries scientists fisheries management is certainly a candidate for calls for reinvention with many of the world leaders in this area holding the view that no fishery has ever been properly understood or managed With fisheries science in a state of flux this extremely important book seeks a new paradigm that will place this flux of ideas in perspective and help us to choose those that will make fisheries management work The book was planned at a symposium of over 100 fishery researchers at the Fisheries Centre University of British Columbia Vancouver Canada and is organized into five parts Why does Fisheries Science Need Reinventing New Policies The Role of the Social Sciences Ecology Modelling Carefully integrated and edited by three of the world s leading fishery scientists this stimulating book should find a place on the shelves of all fishery scientists throughout the world It will be an invaluable reference source to those studying fish biology fisheries and oceanography and all those involved in fisheries policy decisions in government and university research establishments Fisheries Management Tim McClanahan,Juan Carlos Castilla,2008-04-15 The world s stocks of wild fish continue to decline making the task of finding innovative sustainable and socially acceptable methods of fisheries management more important than ever Several new approaches from around the world have proved to be successful in stemming the decline whilst increasing fish catches and under the editorship of McClanahan and Castilla this international team of authors have looked to these examples to provide the reader with carefully chosen case studies offering practical suggestions and solutions for problem fisheries elsewhere Coverage includes Community based fisheries Collaborative and co operative fisheries management Coastal fisheries management The future for sustainable fisheries management Written by many of the world s most experienced practitioners Fisheries Management Progress toward sustainability is an important purchase for all fisheries scientists managers and conservationists All libraries in universities and research establishments where this area is studied and taught will find this book a valuable addition to their shelves A human dimensions approach towards sustainable recreational fisheries management Robert Arlinghaus,2004 Fisheries Management in Areas beyond National Jurisdiction Daniela Diz Pereira Pinto,2012-10-23 Traditional fisheries management based on single species has proved to be inadequate to sustainably manage living resources due to the highly complex structure of marine ecosystems Recent developments in marine scientific research have indicated that the ecosystem based approach which takes into consideration the interdependence among species and their habitats is the most appropriate way to sustainably manage marine living resources Shifting from single species approach to ecosystem based fisheries management EBFM in areas beyond national jurisdiction ABNJ is extremely important because species occurring in these regions are often more vulnerable to collapse than coastal species due to their biological characteristics Fisheries Management in Areas beyond National Jurisdiction describes recent developments of the law of the sea in light of ecosystem approach to fisheries management EBFM and conservation of biodiversity in marine biodiversity Author Daniela Diz Pereira Pinto analyzes this urgent subject in light of the United Nations General Assembly's recent mandate to initiate a process to improve upon the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity in areas beyond national jurisdiction which includes the potential development of a multilateral agreement under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea The monograph interprets states obligations under the current regime identifies governance gaps and provides a number of recommendations and best practices that could be incorporated into a new implementing agreement to UNCLOS A historical overview of EBFM provides useful context for the future development of a more comprehensive legal regime

The Fisheries Co-management Experience Douglas Clyde Wilson, Jesper Raakjaer Nielsen, Poul Degnbol, 2013-03-09 For two decades the idea of governments and fishers working together to manage fisheries has been advocated questioned disparaged and most importantly attempted in fisheries from North and South America through Europe Africa Asia and Oceania This book is the first time these experiences have been pulled together in a single volume summarized and explained The Fisheries Co management Experience begins with a review of the intellectual foundations of the co management idea from several professional perspectives Next fisheries researchers from six global regions describe what has been happening on the ground in their area Finally the volume offers a set of reflections by some of the best authors in the field The end result describes both the state of the art and emerging issues for one of the most important trends in natural resources management

A Fishery Manager's Guidebook Kevern L. Cochrane, Serge M. Garcia, 2009-06-15 Co published with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations Fisheries management is the process that has evolved to try to ensure that fisheries operate in a manner that provides the immediate benefits in a sustainable manner The widely accepted goal is that the full range of benefits should not only be available for this generation but for generations to come Fisheries management has been successful in some cases but there have also been many many cases of failure This volume is intended to contribute to improving this unsatisfactory state by addressing the widespread need for information and guidance on the broad and often complex task of fisheries management It is an updated and expanded edition of the first version of A fishery manager s guidebook which was published as a FAO Fisheries Technical Paper in 2002 The major part of this new edition is divided into five parts intended to cover the range of concerns tools and techniques essential to the modern fisheries manager whether that manager is an individual or a formal or informal group Following the Introduction Part I examines the primary dimensions of fisheries biological ecological social and economic Part II looks at the legal and institutional characteristics of fisheries Part III explores the tools that fishery managers have to achieve the objectives expected from a fishery Part IV discusses the role of scientific information of indicators and reference points Part V moves into implementation of fisheries management and includes a chapter on special considerations in small scale fisheries This landmark publication is aimed at fishery managers and scientists All libraries in research establishments and universities where fisheries and aquatic sciences are studied and taught will need copies of this important volume Fisheries around the world make essential contributions to human well being including the provision of basic food supplies employment recreational opportunities foreign currency and others providing benefits to hundreds of millions of people Despite these benefits our record of managing fisheries so that the benefits can be sustained has been poor at best and most fisheries around the world are experiencing serious ecological social or economic problems and usually all three Today there is global concern about the state of fishery resources and aquatic ecosystems their resilience to future stresses such as climate change and their ability to continue to provide benefits

Strategic Management of Marine Ecosystems Eugene Levner,Igor Linkov,Jean-Marie Proth,2006-05-06 The demand for advanced management methods and tools for marine ecosystems is increasing worldwide Today many marine ecosystems are significantly affected by disastrous pollution from industrial agricultural municipal transportational and other anthropogenic sources The issues of environmental integrity are especially acute in the Mediterranean and Red Sea basins the cradle of modern civilization The drying of the Dead Sea is one of the most vivid examples of environmental disintegration with severe negative consequences on the ecology industry and wildlife in the area Strategic management and coordination of international remedial and restoration efforts is required to improve environmental conditions of marine ecosystems in the Middle East as well as in other areas The NATO Advanced Study Institute ASI held in Nice in October 2003 was designed to 1 provide a discussion forum for the latest developments in the field of environmentally conscious strategic management of marine environments and 2 integrate expertise of ecologists biologists economists and managers from European American Canadian Russian and Israeli organizations in developing a framework for strategic management of marine ecosystems The ASI addressed the following issues Key environmental management problems in exploited marine ecosystems Measuring and monitoring of municipal industrial and agricultural effluents Global contamination of seawaters and required remedial efforts Supply Chain Management approach for strategic coastal zones management and planning Development of environmentally friendly technologies for coastal zone development Modeling for sustainable aquaculture and Social political and economic challenges in marine ecosystem management Fishery Management Rekha R.
