Molecular Biology of Weed Control Jonathan Gressel, 2002-03-28 Weeds are rarely considered a priority despite the fact that all active farmers know that the majority of their variable costs and time are devoted to eradicating them Even most crop losses due to pests can be traced directly back to weeds which harbor the pests as secondary hosts In the Molecular Biology of Weed Control Jonathan Gressel focuses attention upon the tools of molecular biology that can be used effectively in the science of weed control Always keeping his perspective congruent with that of the working farmer Gressel explains how weed biologists and ecologists are beginning to use recently developed tools to control intransigent weed species in modern as well as less developed areas of the world With his usual candor Gressel evaluates past efforts while also exploring future prospects for replacing chemical herbicides with genetic engineering to improve a crop's ability to compete against its feral cousins for light nutrients and water Like much of Gressel's work this book should be mandatory reading for all agriculturists and plant scientists so that they employ and encourage what is truly effective and efficient in meeting one of this century's most critical challenges maximizing agricultural productivity Proceedings, 28th Annual Meeting, Aquatic Plant Control Research Program Aquatic Plant Control Research Program (U.S. Army Engineer Waterways Experiment Station). The Soil Seed Banks of North West Europe Ken Thompson, Jan P. Bakker, Renie M. Bekker, 1997 Buried viable seed banks are a fundamental aspect of seed plant biology They play a key role in the conservation and restoration of plant communities and the response of plants to changing land use and climate There is almost no area of plant ecology in which seed banks are not implicated Despite several recent reviews of the ecology of seed banks there has previously been no single source of data on seed persistence in individual species This volume which compiles the available data from the nineteenth century up to the end of 1993 provides this source for the 1189 members of the northwest European flora The text describes the criteria for inclusion of data and discusses seed classification systems the relative representation of different habitats methods and taxa and challenges for future research Includes PC disc with database in searchable format

Ecologically Based Weed Management Nicholas E. Korres, Ilias S. Travlos, Thomas K.
