Times Iranian journalist Nazila Fathi received a phone call They have given your photo to snipers a government source warned her Soon after with undercover agents closing in Fathi fled the country with her husband and two children beginning a life of exile In The Lonely War Fathi interweaves her story with that of the country she left behind showing how Iran is locked in a battle between hardliners and reformers that dates back to the country's 1979 revolution Fathi was nine years old when that uprising replaced the Iranian shah with a radical Islamic regime Her father an official at a government ministry was fired for wearing a necktie and knowing English to support his family he was forced to labor in an orchard hundreds of miles from Tehran At the same time the family's destitute uneducated housekeeper was able to retire and purchase a modern apartment all because her family supported the new regime As Fathi shows changes like these caused decades of inequality especially for the poor and for women to vanish overnight Yet a new breed of tyranny took its place as she discovered when she began her journalistic career Fathi quickly confronted the upper limits of opportunity for women in the new Iran and earned the enmity of the country's ruthless intelligence service But while she and many other Iranians have fled for the safety of the West millions of their middleclass countrymen many of them the same people whom the regime once lifted out of poverty continue pushing for more personal freedoms and a renewed relationship with the outside world Drawing on over two decades of reporting and extensive interviews with both ordinary Iranians and high level officials before and since her departure Fathi describes Iran's awakening alongside her own revealing how moderates are steadily retaking the country
