National Archives Americas Ministry Of Documents 1934 1968:

The National Archives Donald R. McCoy, 1978 Archives, Documentation, and Institutions of Social Memory Francis Xavier Blouin, William G. Rosenberg, 2007-08-02 Essays exploring the importance of archives as artifacts of culture

Closing an Era Richard J. Cox, 2000-09-30 The importance of records in modern society is explored by re examining some of the historical antecedents for critical functions in the modern records professions The motivation for writing this book comes from a conviction of the importance of records and records professionals in organizations and society as well as the need to possess a stronger sense of the events trends people debates and controversies producing the modern records professions Archivists and records managers have tended to discount the importance of their historical antecedents ignoring the fact that many of the current debates and issues before the profession are not new but embedded in the historical evolution of the records professions Re examining some of the historical origins helps records professionals to re examine their mission to manage records for the benefit of organizations and of all of society Such re evaluation also helps to remind records professionals and others that the concerns generated by new electronic recordkeeping technologies are not new at all but built deep within the fabric of traditional records creation and administration Prologue , 1984 Processing the Past Francis X. Blouin Jr., William G. Rosenberg, 2012-12-18 Processing the Past explores the dramatic changes taking place in historical understanding and archival management and hence the relations between historians and archivists Written by an archivist and a historian it shows how these changes have been brought on by new historical thinking new conceptions of archives changing notions of historical authority modifications in archival practices and new information technologies The book takes an archival turn by situating archives as subjects rather than places of study and examining the increasingly problematic relationships between historical and archival work By showing how nineteenth and early twentieth century historians and archivists in Europe and North America came to occupy the same conceptual and methodological space the book sets the background to these changes In the past authoritative history was based on authoritative archives and mutual understandings of scientific research These connections changed as historians began to ask questions not easily answered by traditional documentation and archivists began to confront an unmanageable increase in the amount of material they processed and the challenges of new electronic technologies The authors contend that historians and archivists have divided into two entirely separate professions with distinct conceptual frameworks training and purposes as well as different understandings of the authorities that govern their work Processing the Past moves toward bridging this divide by speaking in one voice to these very different audiences Blouin and Rosenberg conclude by raising the worrisome question of what future historical archives might be like if historical scholars and archivists no longer understand each other and indeed whether their now different notions of what is archival and historical will ever again be joined The Record United States. National Archives and Records Administration, 1995 Public History Jennifer Lisa Koslow, 2021-02-02 PUBLIC HISTORY

Warner,1995-01-01 Based on unique and previously unpublished sources this book examines in detail the complex emotional and difficult movement to remove the National Archives and Records Service from the control of the U S General Services Administration This struggle began almost from the time the National Archives lost its independence in 1950 and culminated during the tenure of Robert Warner as sixth Archivist of the United States The story is important to the history of the National Archives but also to those interested in the political process especially as it applies to educational and cultural institutions The lobbying overt and covert the interplay of professional organizations and archivists librarians and historians with the executive and legislative branches of the American government are examined in fascinating detail in this often very personal story It is a study of high drama bitter disappointments and ultimate success Encyclopedia of Archival Writers, 1515 - 2015 Luciana Duranti,Patricia C.
