Control of Violence Wilhelm Heitmeyer, Heinz-Gerhard Haupt, Stefan Malthaner, Andrea Kirschner, 2010-11-04 The Control of Violence in Modern Society starts from the hypothesis that in modern society we will face an increasing loss of control over certain phenomena of violence This leads to unpredictable escalations and violence can no longer be contained adequately by the relevant control regimes such as police state surveillance institutions national repression apparatuses and international law However before investigating this hypothesis from an internationally and historically comparative perspective the terms and tools for this undertaking have to be rendered more precisely Since both control and violence are all but clear cut terms but rather highly debatable and contested concepts that may take multiple connotations The main question is whether an increase in certain forms of violence can be explained by the failure or in turn overeffectiveness of certain control mechanisms It is asked for instance which contribution religion can make to limit violence and in turn which destructive potential religion might have in its fundamentalist form Moreover the concept of individual self control as well as social institutions and strategies of collective disengagement and de radicalization are investigated with regard to their potential for controlling violence The Control of Violence in Modern Society concludes with a re examination of the hypothesis of a loss of control by specifying in what cases and under which circumstances we can speak of a loss of control over violence
