The Crucible of Religion Wojciech Maria Zalewski,2012-02-13 Religion is commonly viewed through the lens of the world s religious traditions stressing the differences and often the conflicts among them The author of this book instead presents religion as a common and universal human phenomenon based deeply in a human nature shared by all In this view the underlining and unifying principle of religion is a particular affirmative attitude toward life which he presents as the Ultimate Value and as such the key cultural constituent and defining factor of all religion This Ultimate Value finds its expressions in various civilizations and results in a variety of forms these are what we know as the world s religious traditions By analyzing the roles of both culture and civilization in their attitudes toward life the author places religion beyond religious traditions and shows how the latter regardless of whether they are theistic or atheistic draw their principles from the former mainly by promoting the Golden Rule in its applications

Defining the Sacred Nicola Laneri,2015-05-08 Religion is a phenomenon that is inseparable from human society It brings about a set of emotional ideological and practical elements that are pervasive in the social fabric of any society and characterizable by a number of features These include the establishment of intermediaries in the relationship between humans and the divine the construction of ceremonial places for worshipping the gods and practicing ritual performances and the creation ritual paraphernalia Investigating the religious dimensions of ancient societies encounters problems in defining such elements especially with regard to societies that lack textual evidences and has tended to lead towards the identification of differentiation between the mental dimension related to religious beliefs and the material one associated with religious practices resulting in a separation between scholars able to investigate and possibly reconstruct ritual practices i e archaeologists and those interested in defining the realm of ancient beliefs i e philologists and religious historians The aim of this collection of papers is to attempt to bridge these two dimensions by breaking down existing boundaries in order to form a more comprehensive vision of religion among ancient Near Eastern societies This approach requires that a higher consideration be given to those elements either artificial buildings objects texts etc or natural landscapes animals trees etc that are created through a materialization of religious beliefs and practices enacted by members of communities These issues are addressed in a series of specific case studies covering a broad chronological framework that from the Pre pottery Neolithic to the Iron Age Cover illustration German Archaeological Institute photo N Becker
