SOCIETY, RELIGION AND POLITICS IN SEVENTEENTH CENTURY ENGLAND

Introduction

This class is intended as an introduction to the major themes of social, cultural, and political history in the seventeenth century. This was a period of major upheaval as the society struggled with the pressures of rising population, religious conflict, and tensions between crown and people.

- I Social Structure
- II Family and Household
- III Popular and Unpopular Religion
- IV High Politics: The Origins of the Civil War
- V Popular Politics
- VI Crime
- VII Popular Culture
- VIII Witchcraft

The textbook for the course is K. Wrightson, English Society, 1580-1680 (1982), for most classes specified chapters of Wrightson will be set.

In addition to the textbook, you will be issued with a set of documents, tailored for each of the classes. Please ensure that you have a pack for each of the eight sessions. It is important that you read the documents in advance of each class, as the discussion will centre on them. You will find suggestions as to the kind of questions you might be thinking about for each class under the 'questions for sources' sections on the accompanying lists. I will lead the discussion in the first class, but from the second session onwards, individual members of the class will be asked to do presentations on elements of the course documents. The questions have been allocated to groups: please sort yourselves into groups (they need not be the same assortment of people for each class), and prepare a joint-presentation: no more than 10 minutes per group per class. Please bring the documents with you to the class, together with writing materials. Please do not lose the document packs: you will have to replace them at your own expense.

You are required to write three papers for this class. Each topic has an essay question on which you must write your paper. You may write papers on any of the topics at any time before the end of this class, but you must have completed one of the papers by the end of week 2 of the programme, and another by the end of week 3. For each of the topics a supplementary list of readings is issued (i.e. further readings below). You should be able to obtain these books and articles through the Georgia Programme Library or through the
