Introduction

The family Diapriidae is a relatively poorly known group of parasitic wasps, with less than half of the estimated 4000 worldwide species described (Masner 1993). For the most part, diapriids are small (<5 mm), solitary pupal endoparasites of cyclorhaphous and nematocerous Diptera. The genus Entomacis Foerster (Hymenoptera: Diapriidae) is relatively easily identified in the subfamily Diapriinae (subfamily keys in Nixon 1980; Masner 1991, 1995; Masner and García 2002), tribe Spilomicroini (diagnosed

Dzieciolowski, 2012-12-06 By the end of the 19th century both beaver species had been extirpated from large portions of their native ranges The global decline in beaver populations was the direct result of exploitation by humans Now at the end of the 20th century protection management and reintroduction programs coupled with a decline in the demand for beaver fur and other products have allowed beaver populations to increase dramatically Since beavers actively modify their local environment their activities can conflict with human land use Because of this the beaver once considered a unique and exotic component of wet lands is now often considered a nuisance species The history as well as the current status of beaver populations in Europe and North America provide insight into how conservation programs work and into how humans and wildlife interact The initial plenary lecture of the Euro American Mammal Congress July 1998 was presented by Dr Michael L Rosenzweig a professor at the University of Arizona Dr Rosenzweig discussed how humans have used and continue to use natural resources including wildlife and wildland He provided evidence indicating that the current model of reservation conservation could not provide a long term solution to the human wildlife wildland conflict Dr Rosenzweig emphasized that what is required is a move away from purely exploitive activities I would call this exploitive ecology and the development of a reconciliation ecology with wildlife
