Osipova, 2013-05-21 In recent decades radiobiologists efforts have been directed at identifying the mechanisms of radiation effects the general mechanisms have since been studied extensively This book describes and analyzes radiation induced adaptation as processes produced in cells tissues and populations This viewpoint helps to understand the nature and factors of induced processes to determine the characteristics of observed radiation effects and their limitations The investigations presented here were founded on proper lab experiments ecological studies of plant population growth near an operating nuclear power plant and a thorough epidemiological examination of human populations living in territories polluted fifty years ago as well as on relevant published data This research demonstrates the radiation induced adaptation processes that continue even when the radiation itself is no longer at a critical background level The investigations utilized the method of statistical modeling on the basis of distributions on the number of abnormalities This method allows us to investigate the processes induced by low dose factors when accompanied by Darwinian selection in different systems the distribution parameters can then be used to study the characteristics of adaptation processes and system resistance The consequences of background level radiation continue to provoke debate and the mathematical bases of the adaptation model are shown while due consideration is paid to the components of adaptation instability selection and proliferation The book will be especially useful to specialists in radiation pollution ecology epidemiology and radiology for studies of radiation induced processes the method presented here can also be adapted to investigate low dose effects in other fields In addition the book presents a number of reviews in the fields of radiation biology including pioneering investigations in Russia which were previously unavailable to Western scientists The Fungal Community John Dighton, James F. Conservation Biology Peggy L. Fiedler, 2012-12-06 John Harper Nature conservation has changed from an idealistic philosophy to a serious technology Ecology the science that underpins the technology of conservation is still too immature to provide all the wisdom that it must It is arguable that the desire to conserve nature will in itself force the discipline of ecology to identify fundamental problems in its scientific goals and methods In return ecologists may be able to offer some insights that make conservation more practicable Harper 1987 The idea that nature species or communities is worth preserving rests on several fundamental arguments particularly the argument of nostalgia and the argument of human benefit and need Nostalgia of course is a powerful emotion With some notable exceptions there is usually a feeling of dismay at a change in the status quo whether it be the loss of a place in the country for walking or rambling the loss of a painting or architectural monument or that one will never again have the chance to see a particular species of bird or plant
