Quietly Shrinking Cities Maxwell Hartt, 2021-04-01 At 5 percent Canada s population growth was the highest of all G7 countries when the most recent census was taken But only a handful of large cities drove that growth attracting human and monetary capital from across the country and leaving myriad social economic and environmental challenges behind Quietly Shrinking Cities investigates a trend that has been largely overlooked over 20 percent of Canadian cities shrank between 2011 and 2016 and twice that proportion grew more slowly than the national average Yet continuous ubiquitous growth is considered normal and policy and planning professionals have had little success in managing the practical challenges associated with population loss Declining birth rates and an aging population only compound the phenomenon This meticulous work demonstrates that shrinking cities need to rethink their planning and development strategies in response to a new demographic reality questioning whether population loss and prosperity are indeed mutually exclusive analysis of the spatial consequences and related spatial planning concepts in theory and practice which aim to further sustainable development of city regions urban fringe and rural areas experiencing growth and decline      A Research

Governance and Leadership in Shrinking Cities Stanisław Mazur,2023-08-24 The aim of this publication is to look in depth at depopulation a trend that is affecting an increasing number of cities worldwide It has recently become a critical issue with a range of detrimental social economic spatial and financial consequences However attempts by central and local governments to combat depopulation have yet to yield satisfactory results Compelling evidence suggests that one of the reasons for this state of affairs is that the role of local urban leadership in devising solutions mobilizing resources and creating networks to address the problem has been underestimated Moreover according to the authors of this monograph there is a significant positive correlation between urban leadership and the ability to effectively respond to and counteract the negative effects of depopulation Without an understanding of the impact of urban leadership on the ability to address the negative consequences of urban depopulation it is impossible to pursue effective public policies in this regard This book presents a novel approach to explaining the ability of cities to combat depopulation through the prism of urban leadership quality It compares domestic empirical research findings with international case studies and offers a comprehensive review of valuable practices to counter urban shrinkage and depopulation from both academic and practical perspectives Further the book provides a new interpretation of the processes associated with these trends The magnitude of the phenomenon in question the negative spatial economic and social consequences as well as the relatively low effectiveness of policies aimed at its mitigation will make this book an invaluable guide for researchers and students from a wide range of disciplines including urban studies economics public management leadership studies local government climate change and energy transition and urban movements The audience will also comprise of policymakers and urban experts such as sociologists planners social geographers economists and architects      Local Economic and Employment Development (LEED)

Dealing with Deindustrialization Margaret Cowell, 2014-09-25 The late 1970s and 1980s saw a process of mass factory closures in cities and regions across the Midwest of the United States. What happened next as leaders reacted to the news of each plant closure and to the broader deindustrialization trend that emerged during this time period is the main subject of this book. It shows how leaders in eight metropolitan areas facing deindustrialization strived for adaptive resilience by using economic development policy. The unique attributes of each region, asset bases, modes of governance, civic capacity, leadership qualities and external factors influenced the responses employed and the outcomes achieved. Using adaptive resilience as a lens, Margaret Cowell provides a thorough understanding of how and why regions varied in their abilities to respond to deindustrialization.
