Siege Lucknow 1857:

The Siege of Lucknow 1857 Edward Gosling, 2018-02-19 The Victorian age saw the expansion and unparalleled success of the British Empire. For the British Army, however, the responsibility of defending and controlling such a vast domain was a heavy responsibility. The long nineteenth century saw Britain's military strength sorely and repeatedly tested, and although many victories were achieved, the road was tumultuous. The Siege of Lucknow, central to the Indian Mutiny of 1857-58, stands as a stark and significant example of one of the key instances in history in which the British Army found itself on the back foot, facing swift, bloody, and near defeat at the hands of the native troops of India. This study presents an examination of this remarkable period of British military history from both a military and civilian perspective, building on existing scholarship on the Siege of Lucknow and drawing on original research to shed new light on warfare in the Victorian Age. It provides a clear and concise overview of the siege, placing the fall of Lucknow within the wider context of the Sepoy rebellion in India, before examining the response of the British Army to that most difficult of military scenarios: the siege. It examines the condition of the garrison station at the Commissioner's Residency and the response of the British Army to the immediate challenges faced by a garrison which consisted not only of 855 British soldiers but also 712 loyal sepoys and over one thousand civilians, and its resistance to the worst horrors of siege warfare. Finally, the relief efforts led by General Sir Henry Havelock and later Sir Colin Campbell are explored, detailing the means by which the British Army regained the initiative and seized control from the rebel forces. Delving beyond the immediate military implications of the battle, The Siege of Lucknow also examines the reception of news of the events and their aftermath back in Britain, as the relationship between the British public, the army, and the empire is explored. The heroes of Lucknow, like Sir Henry Havelock, became household names. The 32nd Regiment of Foot were promoted to Light Infantry status as the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry by Queen Victoria in recognition of its conduct and bravery during the siege. The public's imagination was captured, and the British relationship with India was altered irrevocably as a result.

LUCKNOW 1857 - A terrible siege Julia Selina Inglis, 2014-06-30 Blood curdling account of the Siege of Lucknow in 1857, India. A fascinating and shockingly true testimony. This is the personal diary of Julia Selina Inglis, the wife of Major General Sir John Eardley Inglis, who commanded the British troops at the Siege of Lucknow in 1857 in India during the mutiny and uprising of 1857. By June 1857, with three sons aged under five, Julia Inglis was living in the British Residency of Lucknow. On 30 June, under the overall command of Sir Henry Lawrence, the British forces had failed in a preliminary skirmish at Chinhath and retreated into the residency at Lucknow, which immediately came under siege. Book enriched with several Felice Beato and Fenton's photos in a new unpublished terrific coloration and other various images about 40. Two new chapters on the history of Lucknow siege and the biography of the most important subjects of the history.

Lucknow (1857) Mrs. Hamilton Forbes, 1905      A Feeling of Quiet Power P. J. O. Taylor, 1994      The Siege of Lucknow Lady Julia Inglis, Alex Struik, 2013-03-09 The Siege of Lucknow was the prolonged defence of the Residency within the city of Lucknow during the Indian Rebellion of 1857 After two successive relief attempts had reached the city the defenders and civilians were evacuated from the Residency which was abandoned Lucknow was the capital of the former state of Awadh The prolonged defence there by the British proved to be one of the key episodes in the unsuccessful rebellion Mainly there were issues of prestige and morale involved but Lucknow also became the point at which the main forces of both the British and rebels were concentrated The Honourable Julia Selina Lady Inglis 19 April 1833 3 February 1904 was the daughter of Frederic Thesiger 1st Baron Chelmsford and the wife of Major General Sir John Eardley Inglis who commanded the British troops at the Siege of Lucknow in 1857 She kept a diary of her life during the siege which was published as The Siege of Lucknow a Diary      Ladies of Lucknow G. Harris, Adelaide Case, 2010-02 Two enthralling Lucknow diaries in one special edition The siege and relief of the Residency at Lucknow is one of the principal conflicts of the Great Mutiny and became an abiding symbol of the spirit resolution and fortitude of the men and women military and civilian that made the British Empire the globally dominating power it was in the Victorian age It held a well deserved reputation for it was a scene of fierce fighting as the besieged sought to keep out attacking rebellious sepoy forces and their allies and the relieving force had to battle its way into the garrison on two occasions These views of Lucknow are somewhat different Leonaur has joined together two diaries each by a female member of the besieged garrison which chronicle on a day by day basis the experiences of those within the Residency's battered walls This great value book enables the reader to compare two different perspectives on the same events This is especially interesting because the two women came from different backgrounds and occupied different social spheres and so inevitably saw different aspects of the activities of the garrison brought their focus onto different elements of it and evaluated their experiences in different ways The first diary came from the pen of a civilian lady the wife of a Churchman and provides much valuable insight into the suffering of the families in Lucknow The second diary is by a soldier's wife Colonel Case of the 32nd was killed early in the siege but military matters remained very much his widows concern among her other more domestic responsibilities An excellent two for the price of one view of a momentous event      Lucknow 1857 Julia Selina Inglis, 2016 Blood curdling account of the Siege of Lucknow in 1857 India A fascinating and shockingly testimony This is the personal diary of Julia Selina Inglis the wife of Major General Sir John Eardley Inglis who commanded the British troops at the Siege of Lucknow in 1857 in India during the mutiny and uprising of 1857 By June 1857 with three sons aged under five Julia Inglis was living in the British Residency of Lucknow On 30 June under the overall command of Sir Henry Lawrence the British forces had failed in a preliminary skirmish at Chinhath and retreated into the residency at Lucknow which immediately came under siege Book enriched with several Felice Beato and Fenton's photos in a new unpublished terrific coloration and other various images about 40 Two new chapters on the history of Lucknow siege

Katherine Mary Bartrum, 2016-12-06 On 30 May 1857 most of the Oudh and Bengal troops at Lucknow broke into open rebellion against the British East India Company. Tensions had been rising since the year before when the company had annexed the state of Oudh. Feeling their religion and custom were undermined and threatened, the sepoys of the East India Company's Bengal Presidency Army rebelled. Katherine Mary Bartrum was there to witness it all. Her diary records a day by day account of life as one of the besieged and along with the letters that are included give an intense image of this time. As those around are struck down by bullets and disease, Bartrum does her best to survive and help those in need, including her very sick infant child. Bartrum's story is particularly tragic as she spends hour upon hour waiting for her husband and the British forces to break the siege and free those trapped, only to find out that he had been struck down with a bullet to the temple. This heart-rending account provides an insight into the Indian Mutiny, demonstrating the horrors of war from the perspective of a female civilian. Katherine Mary Bartrum's A Widow's Reminiscences of the Siege of Lucknow was published shortly after she had returned to England in 1858.

Besieged in Lucknow Martin Richard Gubbins, 2006-11 Besieged in Lucknow. The full account of a famous siege from a man at the heart of every event. For those who have read anything of the Residency at Lucknow during the Indian Mutiny, the name Gubbins is as familiar as that of Kavanagh or Lawrence. Gubbins Post is as memorable a bastion as Lone Pine was on the Gallipoli Peninsula. This is the story of Martin Gubbins himself, whose house became Gubbins Post and who, among other duties, manned and defended it throughout the siege. No one was better qualified than Gubbins to record the Siege of the Lucknow Residency. Not only was he present from the rumours of mutiny to the relief, but he was central to the command structure, most of the time responsible for intelligence and communications.

Forbes-Mitchell, 2015-07-13 Excerpt from Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny 1857-59 Including the Relief, Siege and Capture of Lucknow and the Campaigns in Rohilcund and Oude. These Reminiscences are submitted to the public in the trust that they will be welcomed alike by soldier and civilian. They are recorded by one who was himself an actor in the scenes which he describes and who viewed them from a novel and most unusual position for a military historian: the ranks. They have been carefully perused by an officer who was present at many of the operations mentioned, and considerable pains have been taken to verify wherever possible those incidents of which he was not personally cognisant. Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny, 1857-59, 2020      Cawnpore & Lucknow D. S. Richards, 2007-03-22 A history of two 1857 sieges in which Indians violently revolted against British colonials featuring accounts from people who lived through them Following the May 1857 uprising by sepoys in Meerut and Delhi the whole future of the British Raj was in the balance Nowhere was this better demonstrated than at Lucknow and Cawnpore At the latter a garrison of 240 with 375 British women and children battled to survive a siege by 3 000 mutineers led by Nana Sahib Unimaginable horrors of artillery and sniper fire coupled with the crippling heat of the Indian summer took their toll An offer of safe passage was treacherously reneged on and the massacres which followed drew a terrible retribution when relief finally arrived in the shape of Generals Havelock and Neil At Lucknow the 1800 British men women and children supported by more than 1 000 loyal sepoys resisted assaults by 20 000 mutineers despite heavy casualties and sickness Sir Colin Campbell s force got through to relieve the garrison and evacuate civilians in November 1857 but the city was not restored to British control until March 1858 These dramatic events are brought to life in this first rate history
