Subcommittee on 21st Century Competitiveness, 2001 Teacher Professional Development for Improving Quality of Teaching Bert Creemers, Leonidas Kyriakides, Panayiotis Antoniou, 2012-11-05 This book makes a major contribution to knowledge and theory by drawing implications of teacher effectiveness research for the field of teacher training and professional development The first part of the book provides a critical review of research on teacher training and professional development and illustrates the limitations of the main approaches to teacher development such as the competence based and the holistic approach A dynamic perspective to policy and practice in teacher training and professional development is advocated The second part of the book provides a critical review of research on teacher effectiveness The main phases of this field of research are analysed It is pointed out that teacher factors are presented as being in opposition to one another An integrated approach in defining quality of teaching is adopted The importance of taking into account findings of studies investigating differential teacher effectiveness is argued Another significant limitation of this field of research is that the whole process of searching for teacher effectiveness factor was not able to have a significant impact upon teacher training and professional development For this reason it is advocated that teacher training and professional development should be focused on how to address grouping of specific teacher factors associated with student learning and on how to help teachers improve their teaching skills by moving from using skills associated with direct teaching only to more advanced skills concerned with new teaching approaches and differentiation of teaching The book refers to studies conducted in different countries illustrating how the proposed approach can be used by policy and practice in teacher education Specifically the book provides evidence supporting the validity of the theoretical framework upon which this approach is based. Moreover, experimental and longitudinal studies supporting the use of this approach for improvement purposes are presented and suggestions for further research utilising and expanding the Dynamic Approach for teacher training and professional development are provided.

A Legacy of Learning David T. Kearns, James Harvey, 2010-12-01 What's wrong with America's schools? Why can't we fix them? How did we wind up with dropout rates of 25 percent and graduates who can barely read and write? Why does the United States spend twice as much on education as the international average and wind up near the bottom of the barrel in global comparisons of student achievement? Why do we lag behind nations such as South Korea, Hungary, and Singapore? And how should we go about improving the situation? Answers to these questions lie at the heart of this volume. David T. Kearns and James Harvey contend we are fine-tuning failure. We have yet to break with the past in order to face a different and challenging future. Despite worshipping at the altar of local control, we have managed to create cookie-cutter schools across the country. We have been sidestepping the transparent need for common expectations about what students should know and be able to do. Standards, the authors say, are not clear enough or high enough. Above all, we have met the enemy and it is us. All of us support change as long as someone else is changing. This book is a fascinating and provocative analysis of where we went wrong and what we need to do to get American education back on track. It defines the kind of education our kids deserve. It calls for a new definition of public education in which choice is taken for granted. And it outlines an action agenda to help parents and citizens make first-class schools truly their own. In the future, the authors argue, we should think of a public school as any other non-profit entity capable of operating in the public interest, free of the red tape now strangling public education. It should be paid for by the public and accountable to the public with its charter or contract routinely revoked when it stops serving public purposes or fails to meet its performance goals.
