metabolic consequences of recent dietary and other lifestyle changes in selected populations in Asia Australia and Africa Scientific evidence suggests that human beings evolved on a diet that was higher in protein complex carbohydrates fiber vitamin C calcium and nutrient density than the diet of developed and developing countries today The hunter gatherer diet was lower in simple carbohydrates total fat saturated fat and trans fatty acids while also maintaining a balance between the omega 6 and omega 3 polyunsaturated fatty acids The reviews in this volume describe the adverse metabolic effects now occurring in different populations undergoing rapid change and suggest how these detrimental effects on health can be prevented or modified

Not Eating Enough Committee on Military Nutrition Research, Institute of Medicine, 1995-09-15 Eating enough food to meet nutritional needs and maintain good health and good performance in all aspects of life both at home and on the job is important for all of us throughout our lives For military personnel however this presents a special challenge Although soldiers typically have a number of options for eating when stationed on a base in the field during missions their meals come in the form of operational rations Unfortunately military personnel in training and field operations often do not eat their rations in the amounts needed to ensure that they meet their energy and nutrient requirements and consequently lose weight and potentially risk loss of effectiveness both in physical and cognitive performance This book contains 20 chapters by military and nonmilitary scientists from such fields as food science food marketing and engineering nutrition physiology psychology and various medical specialties Although described within a context of military tasks the committee's conclusions and recommendations have wide reaching implications for people who find that job related stress changes their eating habits

Creamery and Milk Plant Monthly, 1916 Radioecological Concentration Processes Bertil Åberg, Frank P. Hungate, 2013-10-22 Radioecological Concentration Processes present the overall model for problems of environmental contamination in terms of system analysis This book discusses the major investigational approaches to study of environmental contamination with radioactivity Organized into 90 chapters this book starts with an overview of the results of the experimental investigations into the distribution of strontium in soils and the uptake of this nuclide by plants This text then presents the comparison of the distribution character in different soil types which shows clearly that ploughed soils differ from virgin soils by a more uniform and similar character of radioisotope distribution in them Other chapters consider the migration of ^{90}Sr in the mostly podzolic and water logged soils of moderately northern latitudes of Russia The final chapter deals with the experiments with the shore crab Carcinus maenas which shows that the crab is able to regulate the zinc content of its body against changes in the zinc content of food or of surrounding water Biochemists will find this book useful
