Magical Thinking in Severe Grief Reactions Christian Lönneker, 2019-01-08 Christian Lönneker systematically explores the phenomenon of magical thinking in the context of severe grief reactions focusing on intrusive forms reported by bereaved individuals seeking professional support. The author succeeds in proposing a comprehensive definition of magical thinking and a rationale for its association with grief based on various disciplines such as psychology, anthropology, and the cognitive science of religion. Within the scope of a grounded theory study, case reports comprise themes like bringing the deceased back to life, the magical efficacy of religious rituals, and attempts to ward off harmful influences of the dead.

Magic and the Mind Eugene Subbotsky, 2010-03-31 Magical thinking and behavior have traditionally been viewed as immature, misleading alternatives to scientific thought that in children inevitably diminish with age. In adults, these inclinations have been labeled by psychologists largely as superstitions that feed on frustration, uncertainty, and the unpredictable nature of certain human activities. In Magic and the Mind, Eugene Subbotsky provides an overview of the mechanisms and development of magical thinking and beliefs throughout the life span while arguing that the role of this type of thought in human development should be reconsidered. Rather than an impediment to scientific reasoning or a byproduct of cognitive development in children, magical thinking is an important and necessary complement to these processes, enhancing creativity, problem solving, and reinforcing coping strategies among other benefits. In adults, magical thinking and beliefs perform important functions both for individuals coping with unsolvable problems and stressful situations and for society, enabling mass influence and promoting social harmony. Operating in realms not bound by physical causality, such as emotion, relationships, and suggestion, magical thinking is an ongoing, developing psychological mechanism that Subbotsky argues is integral in the contexts of politics, commercial advertising, and psychotherapy, and undergirds our construction and understanding of meaning in both mental and physical worlds. Magic and the Mind represents a unique contribution to our understanding of the importance of magical thinking, offering experimental evidence and conclusions never before collected in one source. It will be of interest to students and scholars of developmental psychology as well as sociologists, anthropologists, and educators.

Procrastination and Blocking Robert Boice, 1996-12-09 Procrastination means putting off a difficult, delayable, important task in favor of something easier, quicker, and less anxiety provoking. It also means delaying vital actions until the performance and result are less than they would have been if done in a timely manner. Similarly, blocking means that we stumble, delay, and panic in response to a demanding responsibility. Blocking typically occurs when we face public scrutiny, as in writing. In this revisionist and sometimes irreverent book, the author takes academic and professional
