Bangladesh Margolies, Amy, Choo, Esther, Singh, Nishmeet, Parvin, Aklima, Ruel, Marie, Olney, Deanna, 2025-04-28 Urban rural disparities in undernutrition in children under five have dissipated Stunting declined from 2014 to 2022 in both urban and rural areas but more so in rural areas leading to comparable rates of stunting in urban and rural areas 22 percent 24 percent Wasting remains high according to the World Health Organization in both urban and rural areas 11 percent The prevalence of child overweight is low but increasing especially in Dhaka Vitamin A deficiency affects half of children under five Vitamin D and iron deficiencies are higher in urban areas with zinc and iodine deficiencies more prevalent in rural areas Urban and rural diets lack fruits and vegetables A third of urban households have inadequate caloric intake The cost of a healthy diet increased from 3 03 to 3 64 per person per day from 2017 2022 and the percentage of the population unable to afford a healthy diet fell from 65 to 48 percent. Currently 82 million people are unable to afford a healthy diet in the country. The diet diversity of young children has improved since 2011 but gains were seen mostly in rural areas. The percentage of all children fed the minimum meal frequency dropped by 20 percentage points from 2017 to 2022. Urban informal settlements are a concern; children have higher rates of stunting, lower dietary diversity, and higher prevalence of micronutrient deficiencies compared to other urban children. Overweight and obesity in urban adults is a critical problem. More urban women (48 percent) are overweight compared to rural women (35 percent); the same is true for urban men (29 percent) compared to 17 percent for rural men. Some urban nutrition interventions to tackle child undernutrition are being implemented but few have been rigorously evaluated. Data on urban food environments (FEs) is becoming more available but there are gaps in knowledge, particularly on the design and evaluation of interventions to counter the influence of the country's increasingly obesogenic urban FE. National policies include targeted actions to improve urban diets and nutrition. More could be done, however, to improve the healthiness and safety of FEs, leverage social protection programs for the urban poor to make healthy diets more affordable, and to implement double-duty actions to address all forms of malnutrition.

Nutrition, Well-Being and Health Jaouad Bouayed, Torsten Bohn, 2012-02-23. In our modern society, expectations are high, also with respect to our daily diet. In addition to being merely nutritious, i.e. supplying a variety of essential nutrients including macro nutrients such as proteins or micro nutrients such as minerals and vitamins, it is almost expected that a good diet offers further advantages, especially well-being and health, and the prevention of chronic diseases, which are, as we generally tend to grow older and older, becoming a burden to enjoying private life and to the entire society. These additional qualities are often sought in diets rich also in non-nutritive components such as phytochemicals. In contrast to drugs, which are taken especially to cure or ameliorate diseases, it is expected that a healthy diet acts in particular on the side of prevention, allowing us to become old without feeling old. In the present book, rather than trying to give an exhaustive overview on nutritional aspects and their link to well-being and health, selected topics have been chosen, intended to address presently discussed key issues of nutrition for health, presenting a reasonable selection of the manifold topics around diet, well-being and health, from the antioxidants polyphenols and carotenoids, aroma-active terpenoids, to calcium for bone health, back to traditional Chinese Medicine.

Resilient Cities urban nutrition profile: Kenya, 2025-03-18. Despite progress in reducing child stunting over the past 15 years, Kenya is now facing new nutrition challenges, including overweight and obesity. The double burden of malnutrition (DBM), which is the coexistence of under- and overnutrition within individuals, households, and populations, manifests as child stunting and adult overweight, mostly in women, at the population and household levels. Dietary diversity is low and affects different population groups, particularly young children, adolescents, and women, predisposing them to micronutrient deficiencies. However, recent data on micronutrient intake and status are lacking. Households living in urban areas are vulnerable to being overweight, a consequence of increasingly unhealthy dietary patterns. In Kenya's informal urban settlements limited dietary diversity reliance on cereals and widespread consumption of ultra processed foods UPFs contribute to high rates of child stunting underweight and the DBM with affordability and accessibility driving food choices Compounding factors include food safety concerns clustering of unhealthy food vendors and external shocks Urban nutrition interventions have had mixed results with some programs improving child health and maternal knowledge but others showing no significant impact Kenya aims to eliminate malnutrition by 2027 but national policies focus mostly on rural areas leaving urban nutrition challenges insufficiently addressed Programs such as Afya Jiji and the Nairobi City County Food System Strategy target urban health but gaps in urban specific strategies poor coordination and limited funding hinder progress The national school meals program serves only a small portion of schools and urban food policies are still underdeveloped
