The Magistrate's Tale Trevor Grove,2012-08-07 When Trevor Grove was called up for Jury service he became so intrigued with the justice system that he wrote a successful book about it The Juryman's Tale Now he's joined the magistracy and gives a fascinating funny and insightful account of just how the magistracy works at a time of great change Lay magistrates deal with more than 95 per cent of all criminal cases in England and Wales yet they are all volunteers drawn from local communities with no legal training or special qualifications and are not paid a penny for what they do Astonishingly little is known about what it is like to serve as a magistrate Each year 5 000 people apply to become magistrates only 25 per cent are successful This book is the first for many years to shed light on the experience Interweaving his own personal experience of becoming a magistrate in north London with general observations relevant interviews and a little history Trevor Grove takes us on a fascinating journey into this extraordinary and unique institution He has visited courts all over the country to talk to magistrates and observe how crimes and criminals differ from region to region and how the benches dealing with them differ too He has visited jails and Young Offenders Institutions and he has interviewed all of the principal players from the Lord Chief Justice and Home Secretary to more integral characters such as justices clerks ushers probation officers local police and offenders His journey uncovers a remarkable act of national faith in the good sense of ordinary people which says a great deal more about the strength and health of our democracy than is sufficiently appreciated as a central constitutional protection It nevertheless remains unclear what precisely should count as a fair trial and who should decide verdicts This already difficult issue has become even more important given a number of proposed reforms of the trial especially for defendants charged with terrorism offences This collection The Right to a Fair Trial is the first to publish in one place the most influential work in the field on the following topics including the right to jury trial lay

Changing Contours of Criminal Justice Mary Bosworth,Carolyn Hoyle,Lucia Zedner,2016-11-17 Celebrating the 50th Anniversary of the Oxford Centre for Criminology this edited collection of essays seeks to explore the changing contours of criminal justice over the past half century and to consider possible shifts over the next few decades The question of how social science disciplines develop and change does not invite any easy answer with the task made all the more difficult given the highly politicised nature of some subjects and the volatile evolving status of its institutions and practices A case in point is criminal justice at once fairly parochial much criminal justice scholarship is now global in its reach and subject areas that are now accepted as central to its study victims restorative justice security privatization terrorism citizenship and migration to name just a few were topics unknown to the discipline half a century ago Indeed most criminologists would have once stoutly denied that they had anything to do with it Likewise some central topics of past criminological attention like probation have largely receded from academic attention and some central criminal justice institutions like Borstal and corporal punishment have at least in Europe been abolished Although the rapidity and radical nature of this change make it quite impossible to predict what criminal justice will look like in fifty years time reflection on such developments may assist in understanding how it arrived at its current form and hint at what the future holds The contributors to this volume have been invited to reflect on the impact Oxford criminology has had on the discipline providing a unique and critical discussion about the current state of criminal justice around the world and the origins and future implications of contemporary practice All are leading internationally renowned criminologists whose work has defined and often re defined our understanding of criminal justice policy and literature
