POETIC DISCOURSE IN A TIME OF CRISIS: THE CONCEPT OF LYRICISM

Natalia Pavlovna Neborsina

Doctor of science, assistant professor,

Professor of English Philology Department, Institute of Philology

Taras Shevchenko National University, Ukraine

Summary. The study of poetic discourse received great impetus from the beginning of the twentieth century onward with the rise of general linguistics (Linguistic Poetics), and sociology (Sociological Poetics). As for Linguistic Poetics, presented in the framework of Roman Jakobson, it had exhausted its potential for theoretical inquiry. Sociological Poetics, on the contrary, has not yet received the attention it deserves. This paper provides a brief account of two projects of Sociological Poetics devised by Voloshinov/Bakhtin, and T. Adorno. It offers schematic conceptualization of the notion of lyricism; contains some observations on the aesthetic evaluation of the realization of the concept lyricism through the prism of rhetorical sublime.

Keywords: lyricism, poetic discourse, linguistic poetics

Introduction

On May 25, 2020, as part of the American University in Paris' Conference on the Psychology of Global Crisis, a panel discussion was elaborated entitled, The Poetics of Crisis in which the participants explored how crisis gives voice and purpose to poetry and how poetry gives voice and purpose to crisis.

The participants of the conference entered into dialogue again, exploring poetry's role in protest, acceptance, and resolution in the special issue of Human Arenas associated with the Psychology of Global Crisis 2020.

Here is the way Dialogue begins:

Q/JkR: Crisis exists at the interface of dissolution and emergence. Stephane Mallarme, a nineteenth century French poet, wrote that "poetry is the language of a state of crisis" (Mallarme et al. 2006). In your own experience how this is true, and how is this truth reflected in your own poetry?

A/TH: On a very personal level, I can say that much of my own poetry has arisen out of crisis, whether it be personal or global. Poetry is beauty, of course, but I think some pain is required, too. Most of the work of the poet isn't writing: it's loving the world enough, feeling its depth and subjectivity, inevitably involves experiencing pain.

We see that in the answer to the question the notion "crisis" has been elaborated into personal and global . Or to use Christopher Caudwell's terminology – 'a social subjectiveness or social ego', and a social objectiveness or social world' (247). In addition, 'beauty' and 'pain' appear as constituents of the concept 'lyricism'.

As regards crisis, Caudwell alludes to it in his Illusion and Reality: "Every phase of Art, every stage of culture, had its moving principle which is the source of its

Poetic Discourse:

Studies in Poetic Discourse Hans-Jost Frey, 1996 This study of four major poets Mallarme Baudelaire Rimbaud and Holderlin examines the self reflexivity of modern poetry exploring questions concerning what it means for a poem to be about its own process of saying What does it mean to read and understand a text that is focused not on its content but on its saying What kind of relation does a writer have to the language used in a text How are we to think about the relation of content to the saying In the chapter on Mallarme the author uses several close readings to investigate the referentiality of literature in general and the concept of undecidability in Mallarme For example in A la nue accablante tu he shows the way undecidability operates in syntax metaphors sounds and plays on individual letters of the alphabet The chapter on Rimbaud explores the significance of the poet's famous statement Je est un autre I is an other leading to a meditation on the question of the control of the author the relationship between saying and that which is said the way in which language overwhelms the speaker In the Baudelaire chapter the author analyzes the themes of memory and imagination in Baudelaire's writings on painting and Victor Hugo showing how these themes reveal the writer's thoughts on artistic conception and execution The author then reads Holderlin's hymn Der Rhein with the fifth of Rousseau's Reveries du promeneur solitaire showing how in Holderlin's poem and other texts the crucial issue is a paradoxical relationship between lack and fullness or perfection The final Holderlin chapter presents a sustained critique of Heidegger's exegesis of Holderlin opening new avenues in the discussions of both Holderlin and Heidegger

Mikhail Bakhtin Gary Saul Morson,Caryl Emerson,1990 Books about thinkers require a kind of unity that their thought may not possess This cautionary statement is especially applicable to Mikhail Bakhtin whose intellectual development displays a diversity of insights that cannot be easily integrated or accurately described in terms of a single overriding concern Indeed in a career spanning some sixty years he experienced both dramatic and gradual changes in his thinking returned to abandoned insights that he then developed in unexpected ways and worked through new ideas only loosely related to his earlier concerns Small wonder then that Bakhtin should have speculated on the relations among received notions of biography unity innovation and the creative process Unity with respect not only to individuals but also to art culture and the world generally is usually understood as conformity to an underlying structure or an overarching scheme Bakhtin believed that this idea of unity contradicts the possibility of true creativity For if everything conforms to a preexisting pattern then genuine development is reduced to mere discovery to a mere uncovering of something that in a strong sense is already there And yet Bakhtin accepted that some concept of unity was essential Without it the world ceases to make sense and creativity again disappears this time replaced by the purely aleatory There would again be no possibility of anything meaningfully new The grim truth of these two extremes was expressed well by Borges an inescapable labyrinth could consist of an infinite number of turns or of no turns at all Bakhtin attempted to rethink the concept of unity in order to allow for the possibility of genuine creativity The goal in his words was a nonmonologic unity in which real change or surprisingness is an essential component of the creative process As it happens such change was characteristic of Bakhtin's own thought which seems to have developed by continually diverging from his initial intentions Although it would not necessarily follow that the development of Bakhtin's thought corresponded to his ideas about unity and creativity we believe that in this case his ideas on nonmonologic unity are useful in understanding his own thought as well as that of other thinkers whose careers are comparably varied and productive between subjects in a community goodness The work considers the relation of the Poetics to other Aristotelian texts the transmission of these works to the commentators context and the motivations driving the commentators reception of the texts The book focuses on issues central to the classical relation of beauty to truth and goodness Poetry as Play Maria Cristina Quintero,1991-01-01 During the Golden Age poetry and drama entered into a dynamic intertextual and intergeneric exchange The Comedia appropriated the different poetic currents prevalent during the Renaissance and also often enacted the controversies surrounding poetic language Of particular interest is the influence of gongorismo on the comedia Luis de G ngora himself experimented with dramatic form in his two little known plays Las firmezas de Isabela and El doctor Carlino In his quest for effective dramatic language Lope de Vega dramatized Gongorine language through both parody and respectful imitation Calder n de la Barca whose plays represent the culmination of G ngora s influence on Golden Age theater transformed gongorismo into a rich performative code that functions simultaneously as poetic discourse and dramatic convention
