

The background of the cover features five Goldfinches in various stages of flight. One is in the top left, another in the top right, a third on the left side, and two in the bottom right. They have brown bodies, white faces with black stripes, and wings with prominent yellow patches. Scattered around the birds are several dandelion seeds, some fully formed and some just seeds on thin stems. A large, detailed dandelion seed head is positioned in the lower center, partially overlapping the title and authors' names.

The volume is divided into two parts separated by an Intermezzo The first part Dystopia Matters benefits from the contribution of reputed scholars of the field of Utopian Studies who were asked to make a statement explaining why dystopia is important The Intermezzo completes this part and offers the reader an informed discussion of the concepts of utopia dystopia and anti utopia whilst providing ground for the case studies presented in the second part in the sections devoted to literature film and theatre In one way or another despite the variety of approaches all contributors argue for the idea that if dystopia has invaded most forms of contemporary discourse its sibling utopia has not been eradicated from the scene Furthermore the studies show that the tension between the two concepts is instrumental to our cautious conscious and tentative construction of the future Kalevala; The Epic Poem of Finland into English, Book I Elias Architecture of Ruins Jonathan Hill, 2019-03-25. The Architecture of Ruins: Designs on the Past, Present, and Future identifies an alternative and significant history of architecture from the sixteenth century to the twenty-first century in which a building is designed, occupied, and imagined as a ruin. This design practice conceives a monument and a ruin as creative, interdependent, and simultaneous themes within a single building, dialectically addressing temporal and environmental questions in poetic, psychological, and practical terms, and stimulating questions of personal and national identity, nature, and culture, weather, and climate, permanence and impermanence, and life and death. Conceiving a building as a dialogue between a monument and a ruin intensifies the already blurred relations between the unfinished and the ruined and envisages the past, the present, and the future in a single architecture. Structured around a collection of biographies, this book conceives a monument and a ruin as metaphors for a life and means to negotiate between a self and a society. Emphasising the interconnections between designers and the particular ways in which later architects learned from earlier ones, the chapters investigate an evolving interdisciplinary design practice to show the relevance of historical understanding to design. Like a history, a design is a reinterpretation of the past that is meaningful to the present. Equally, a design is equivalent to a fiction, convincing users to suspend disbelief. We expect a history or a novel to be written in words, but they can also be delineated in drawing, cast in concrete, or seeded in soil. The architect is a physical novelist as well as a physical historian. Like building sites, ruins are full of potential. In revealing not only what is lost but also what is incomplete, a ruin suggests the future as well as the past. As a stimulus to the imagination, a ruin's incomplete and broken forms expand architecture's allegorical and metaphorical capacity, indicating that a building can remain unfinished, literally and in the imagination, focusing attention on the creativity of users as well as architects. Emphasising the symbiotic relations between nature and culture, a building designed, occupied, and imagined as a ruin acknowledges the coproduction of multiple authors, whether human, non-human, or atmospheric, and is an appropriate model for architecture in an era of increasing climate change.
