

Second Language Acquisition Theory

Acculturation Model

According to Zaker (2015), learning a second language (L2) is now believed to be a multi-faceted phenomenon which is affected by numerous factors, ranging from internal to social and cultural factors, and, consequently, many studies have highlighted the significant impact of culture on learning a second language. Accordingly, culture is now believed to be a major learning-affecting factor which, along with linguistic competence, facilitates the process of L2 learning.

Galloway(2003) defines cultures as "powerful human creations, affording their members a shared identity, a cohesive framework for selecting, constructing, and interpreting perceptions, and for assigning value and meaning in consistent fashion."

One famous longitudinal investigation was conducted by John H. Schumann during the fall of 1973, a research project was undertaken to make a ten-month longitudinal study of the untutored acquisition of English language by six native speakers of Spanish

Approaches in Foreign Language Teaching Carmen Neagu,2023-01-22 The purpose of this theoretical and experimental paper is to clarify the influence of an extensive learning program on high school students language comprehension and attitude towards reading The experiment was administered throughout a school semester with a control group following the intensive approach and an experimental group subject to the extensive approach The intervention of the experiment was represented by the two teaching approaches extensive vs intensive whereas the measured outcome consisted in the learners changes in language proficiency and attitude towards reading Since both intensive and extensive approaches are necessary in order to prepare students for college tasks the senior high school period is an ideal moment to start introducing extensive language programs as a means of achieving and not substituting the communicative competence Furthermore the reading habit will outlast and accompany students as a lifelong second nature      New Perspectives and New Directions in
