Acculturation Model

According to Zaker (2015), learning a second language (L2) is now believed to be a multi-faceted phenomenon which is affected by numerous factors, ranging from internal to social and cultural factors, and, consequently, many studies have highlighted the significant impact of culture on learning a second language. Accordingly, culture is now believed to be a major learning-affecting factor which, along with linguistic competence, facilitates the process of L2 learning.

Galloway(2003) defines cultures as "powerful human creations, affording their members a shared identity, a cohesive framework for selecting, constructing, and interpreting perceptions, and for assigning value and meaning in consistent fashion."

One famous longitudinal investigation was conducted by John H. Schumann during the fall of 1973, a research project was undertaken to make a ten-month longitudinal study of the untutored acquisition of English language by six native speakers of Spanish
