Gentle Blood; Or, The Secret Marriage. A Novel James Roderick O'Flanagan, 1861

A Search for a Secret: A Novel (Complete) George Alfred Henty, 1955-01-01 There are towns over which time seems to exercise but little power but to have passed them by forgotten in his swift course Everywhere else at his touch all is changed Great cities rise upon the site of fishing villages huge factories with their smoky chimneys grow up and metamorphose quiet towns into busy hives of industry while other cities once prosperous and flourishing sink into insignificance and the passer by as he wanders through their deserted streets wonders and laments over the ruin which has fallen upon them But the towns of which I am speaking and of which there are but few now left in England and these with hardly an exception cathedral towns seem to suffer no such change They neither progress nor fall back If left behind they are not beaten in the race for they have never entered upon it but are content to rest under the shelter of their tall spires and towers to seek for no change and to meet with none but to remain beloved as no other towns are loved by those who have long known them assimilating as it were the very natures of those who dwell in them to their own sober neutral tints In these towns a wanderer who has left them as a boy returning as an old old man will see but little change a house gone here another nearly similar built in its place a greyer tint upon the stone a tree fallen in the old close the ivy climbing a little higher upon the crumbling wall these are all or nearly all the changes which he will see The trains rush past bearing their countless passengers who so rarely think of stopping there that the rooks as they hold their grave conversations in their nests in the old elm trees cease to break off even for a moment at the sound of the distant whistle The very people seem although this is but seeming to have changed as little as the place the same names are over the shop doors the boy who was at school has taken his grand sire s place and stands at his door looking down the quiet street as the old man used to do before him the dogs are asleep in the sunny corners they formerly loved and the same horses seem to be lazily drawing the carts with familiar names upon them into the old market place The wanderer may almost fancy that he has awoke from a long troubled dream It is true that if he enters the little churchyard he will see beneath the dark shadows of the yew trees more gravestones than there were of old but the names are so similar that it is only upon reading them over that he will find that it is true after all and that the friends and playfellows of his childhood the strong merry boys and the fair girls with sunny ringlets sleep peacefully there But it is not full yet and he may hope that when his time shall come there may be some quiet nook found where even as a child he may have fancied that he would like some day to rest Among these cities pre eminent as a type of its class is the town in which I now sit down to recount the past events of my life and of the lives of those most dear to me not egotistically I hope nor thrusting my own story in which indeed there is little enough into view but telling of those I have known and lived with as I have noted the events down in my journal and at times when the things I speak of are related merely on hearsay dropping that dreadful personal pronoun which will get so prominent and telling the story as it was told to me Although not born at Canterbury I look upon it as my native town my city of adoption My earliest remembrances are of the place my childhood and youth were spent there and although I was then for a few years absent it was for that stormy stirring time when life is wrapped up in persons and not in places when the mere scene in which the drama is played out leaves barely an impression upon the mind so all absorbing is the interest in the performers That time over I returned to Canterbury as to my home and hope beneath the shadow of its stately towers to pass tranquilly down the hill of life whose ascent I there made with such eager strong young steps
