However, in spite of the continued massive losses, and their ineffective character of the ex-Terrace officers, from leaders like Taha Aderki and Baillif, as well as the ex-police soldiers like Yambouk and Doudouk, managed to organize things very successfully. The volunteer system had quickly been replaced by conscription, but only prisoners and ex-soldiers had the honour of defending their country under arms. A general amnesty was issued, aimed to soothe the White troops but the Division which were opposing Moussouri, to the war cry "People to the front!" did not feel ready to be deceived. They dispersed the Whites. This 1919 saw the rapid disbandment of the Black contingents, who were ordered with suffering and dying for a cause about which they hardly cared. Nevertheless it took another two years before the country was freed of all the last remnants of the White army in Kouril, M'poko and the Ouham, and even in the government in Moussouri.
