Self and Story in Russian History Laura Engelstein, Stephanie Sandler, 2018-08-06 Russians have often been characterized as people with souls rather than selves Self and Story in Russian History challenges the portrayal of the Russian character as selfless self-effacing or self-torturing by exploring the texts through which Russians have defined themselves as private persons and shaped their relation to the cultural community The stories of self under consideration here reflect the perspectives of men and women from the last two hundred years ranging from westernized nobles to simple peasants from such famous people as Tolstoy Dostoyevsky Akhmatova and Nicholas II to lowly religious sectarians Fifteen distinguished historians and literary scholars situate the narratives of self in their historical context and show how since the eighteenth century Russians have used expressive genres including diaries novels medical case studies films letters and theater to make political and moral statements The first book to examine the narration of self as idea and ideal in Russia this vital work contemplates the shifting historical manifestations of identity the strategies of self-creation and the diversity of narrative forms Its authors establish that there is a history of the individual in Russian culture roughly analogous to the one associated with the West

L. Doctorow and Jeffrey Eugenides Each novel has a similar structure an observer-narrator tells the story of an important person in his life who has died But each story is equally about the struggle to tell the story to find adequate means to narrate the transitional quality of the hero's life In playing out this narrative struggle each novel thereby addresses the broader problem of historical transition a problem that marks the legacy of the postmodern era in American literature and culture
