Maritime Blockade Of Germany In The Great War:

The Maritime Blockade of Germany in the Great War John D. Grainger, 2020-11-25 The Tenth Cruiser Squadron of the Grand Fleet had the task of patrolling the seas between Scotland and Greenland to intercept enemy ships trying to escape into the ocean and merchant ships who could be carrying goods destined for Germany This was a task of great political sensitivity since almost all the ships intercepted were neutrals and requiring great physical endurance from ships and men in the violent North Atlantic The Maritime Blockade of Germany in the Great War is a comprehensive collection of the records of the Northern Patrol It consists of regular reports of the admirals in command to which are added other relevant official records and more informal documents There are the chatty letters of Captain Vivian and HMS Patia the appalling experiences of young officers placed in barely seaworthy sailing ships to see that they went into port for examination the pathetic mutiny by a bored distressed and underpaid black gang the diary of Able Seaman Style demonstrating the tedium of the patrol and the self satisfied diary of Dr Shaw There are also the casualties ships overwhelmed by storms sunk by enemy action torpedoed The ships of the Patrol were perhaps the most constantly active Royal Navy vessels in the Great War a barely acknowledged yet vital component in the eventual Allied victory

Strategy and War Planning in the British Navy, 1887-1918 Shawn T. Grimes, 2012 Overturns existing thinking to show that the Royal Navy engaged professionally in war planning in the years before the First World War It has been widely accepted that British naval war planning from the late nineteenth century to the First World War was amateur and driven by personal political agenda But Shawn T Grimes argues that this was far from the case His extensive original research shows that in fact the Royal Navy had a definitive war strategy which was well thought through and formulated in a professional manner Faced by a perceived Franco Russian naval threat the Admiralty adopted an offensive strategy from 1888 to 1905 based on observational blockade and combined operations This strategy was modified after 1905 for war with Wilhelmine Germany The book shows how specific war plans aimed at Germany's naval and economic assets in the Baltic were drawn up between 1906 and 1908 and that the strategy of primary distant blockade formulated between 1897 and 1907 became a reality in late 1912 and not July 1914 as previously thought The book argues that the Naval Intelligence Department which took a lead in devising these plans was the Navy's de facto staff Overall it is clear that there was a continuity underpinning British thinking about how to wage a naval war SHAWN GRIMES received his PhD in history from the University of London and has been a Lecturer in European History at the University of Saskatchewan
