into the twentieth Mrinalini Rajagopalan argues that the modern construction of the history of these monuments entailed the careful selection manipulation and regulation of the past by both the colonial and later postcolonial states Although framed as objective archival truths these histories were meant to erase or marginalize the powerful and persistent affective appropriations of the monuments by groups who often existed outside the center of power By analyzing these archival and affective histories together Rajagopalan works to redefine the historic monument far from a symbol of a specific past the monument is shown in Building Histories to be a culturally mutable object with multiple stories to tell

Reuse Value Richard Brilliant, Dale Kinney, 2016-04-08 This book offers a range of views on spolia and appropriation in art and architecture from fourth century Rome to the late twentieth century Using case studies from different historical moments and cultures contributors test the limits of spolia as a critical category and seek to define its specific character in relation to other forms of artistic appropriation Several authors explore the ethical issues raised by spoliation and their implications for the evaluation and interpretation of new work made with spolia The contemporary fascination with spolia is part of a larger cultural preoccupation with reuse recycling appropriation and representation in the Western world All of these practices speak to a desire to make use of pre existing artifacts objects images expressions for contemporary purposes Several essays in this volume focus on the distinction between spolia and other forms of reused objects While some authors prefer to elide such distinctions others insist that spolia entail some form of taking often violent and a diminution of the source from which they are removed The book opens with an essay by the scholar most responsible for the popularity of spolia studies in the later twentieth century Arnold Esch whose seminal article Spolien was published in 1969 Subsequent essays treat late Roman antiquity the Eastern Mediterranean and the Western Middle Ages medieval and modern attitudes to spolia in Southern Asia the Italian Renaissance the European Enlightenment modern
