decades American suburbs have undergone a so called renaissance as multiple forces have transformed them into denser urban landscapes Yet at the same time suburban racial diversity immigration and poverty rates have surged The Right to Suburbia investigates how marginalized communities in the suburbs of Washington DC one of the most intensely gentrifying metropolitan regions in the United States have battled the uneven costs and benefits of redevelopment Willow Lung Amam narrates the efforts of activists community groups and political leaders fighting for communities right to suburbia that is their right to stay put and benefit from new neighborhood investments Revealing the far reaching impacts of state led redevelopment The Right to Suburbia shows how patterns of unequal racialized development and displacement are being produced and reproduced in suburbs and how communities are fighting back

Contemporary Patterns Of Politics, Praxis, And Culture Georgia Anne Persons, 2005-01-01 The National Political Science Review is the official publication of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists This new volume Contemporary Patterns of Politics Praxis and Culture reflects major research focuses across religion race gender culture and of course politics Themes that engage a community of scholars also engage them in praxis as individual citizens and practitioners in a democratic society and collectively as member participants in a changing culture Two themes religion and culture are relatively new areas of intellectual curiosity for political scientists Articles in this volume extend the beachheads already established by African American political scientists in studies that gauge the significance and influence of religion in both individual and group behavior They chart religion s inevitable move onto the center stage of U S public affairs The study of culture has essentially languished for almost a generation within political science especially with regard to the study of American politics and society During this time the emphasis has also shifted significantly from an almost exclusive focus on civic culture to an expanding focus on the broad expanse of popular culture in the contemporary period Culture is the crucible within which politics race religion and gender both foment and ferment and artistic products of the culture are manifestations and mirrors of how we envision and construct a changing reality Issues of race religion gender and culture are all dimensions of individual and group identity The dynamics of changing individual and group identities change the underlying cultural canvas against which identity is displayed and politics is acted out The concept of praxis is relatively new to the lexicon of political science However engagement in the practice of politics is not a new idea for African American social scientists Indeed particularly for this group and clearly for many others scholarship influences praxis and praxis influences scholarship This volume will be of particular interest to ethnic studies specialists African American studies scholars political scientists historians and sociologists Georgia A Persons is professor of political science in the School of Public Policy at Georgia Institute of Technology where she also directs the Center for the Study of Social Change

Handbook of Community Movements and Local Organizations Ram A. Cnaan, Carl Milofsky, 2007-12-18 Although the way associations and the organization of local social life are intertwined is one of the oldest approaches to community study the way citizens and residents come together informally to act and solve problems has rarely been a primary focus. Associations are central to important and developing areas of social theory and social action. This handbook takes voluntary associations as the starting point for making sense of communities. It offers a new perspective on voluntary organizations and gives an integrated yet diverse theoretical understanding of this important aspect of community life. American Book Publishing Record, 2003. Beyond Segregation Michael Maly, 2011-01-19. Sharpening our understanding of urban America's integrated neighborhoods. We Are Worth Fighting For Joshua M. Myers, 2019-12-24. The Howard University protests from the perspective and worldview of its participants. We Are Worth Fighting For is the first history of the 1989 Howard University protest. The three-day occupation of the university's Administration Building was a continuation of the student movements of the sixties and a unique challenge to the politics of the eighties. Upset at the university's appointment of the Republican strategist Lee Atwater to the Board of Trustees, students forced the issue by shutting down the operations of the university. The protest inspired in part by the emergence of conscious hip hop helped to build support for the idea of student governance and drew upon a resurgent black nationalist ethos. At the center of this story is a student organization known as Black Nia F O R C E Co. founded by Ras Baraka; the group was at the forefront of organizing the student mobilization at Howard during the spring of 1989 and thereafter. We Are Worth Fighting For explores how black student activists, young men and women, helped shape and resist the rightward shift and neoliberal foundations of American politics. This history adds to the literature on Black campus activism, Black Power studies, and the emerging histories of African American life in the 1980s. America, History and Life, 2004. Article abstracts and citations of reviews and dissertations covering the United States and Canada.

Race/Class Conflict and Urban Financial Threat Jennifer L. Hochschild, 2024-12-19. Race and class inequality are at the crux of many policy disputes in American cities. But are they the only factors driving political discord? In Race, Class Conflict and Urban Financial Threat, political scientist Jennifer L. Hochschild examines significant policies in four major American cities to determine when race and class shape city politics, when they do not, and what additional forces have the power to shape urban policy choices. Hochschild investigates the root causes of disputes in the arenas of policing, development, schooling, and budgeting. She finds that race and class are central to the Stop Question Frisk policing policy in New York City and the development of Atlanta's Beltline. New York's Stop Question Frisk policy was intended to fight crime and keep all New Yorkers safe. In practice, however, young Black and Latino men in low-income neighborhoods were disproportionately stopped by a predominantly White police force. The goal of the Atlanta Beltline, a redevelopment project that includes public parks, new housing, commercial development, and a robust public transit system, is to expand access around the city and keep working-class residents in the city by constructing affordable housing. Instead, the construction completed thus far has encouraged gentrification and displacement of poor, disproportionately Black residents and has increased the wealth and power of both Black and White city elites. However, Hochschild finds that race and class inequality are not central to all urban policy disputes When investigating the issues of charter schools in Los Angeles and Chicago's pension system she identifies a third driver financial threat that feels existential to the policy and political actors In Los Angeles there is a battle between traditional public schools and independent charter schools Increasingly families with sufficient resources are moving out of L A to areas with better school districts Traditional public schools and charter schools must fight for the remaining students and the funding that comes with them There are not enough students to teach and not enough money to teach them The school district risks school closures layoffs and pension deficits in this context race class conflict fades into the background Chicago's public sector pension debt is at least three times as large as the city's annual budget and continues to grow Policy actors agree that the pension system needs to be stably funded Yet city leaders fearful of upsetting constituents and jeopardizing their political careers fail to implement policies that would do so Meaningful policy change to rectify the pension deficit continues to get kicked down the line for future policy actors to address In this context also race class conflict fades into the background Race Class Conflict and Urban Financial Threat is a compelling examination of the role that race class and political and fiscal threat play in shaping urban policy

Sundown Towns James W. Loewen, 2018-07-17 Powerful and important an instant classic The Washington Post Book World The award winning look at an ugly aspect of American racism by the bestselling author of Lies My Teacher Told Me reissued with a new preface by the author In this groundbreaking work sociologist James W Loewen author of the classic bestseller Lies My Teacher Told Me brings to light decades of hidden racial exclusion in America In a provocative sweeping analysis of American residential patterns Loewen uncovers the thousands of sundown towns almost exclusively white towns where it was an unspoken rule that blacks weren't welcome that cropped up throughout the twentieth century most of them located outside of the South Written with Loewen's trademark honesty and thoroughness Sundown Towns won the Gustavus Myers Outstanding Book Award received starred reviews in Publishers Weekly and Booklist and launched a nationwide online effort to track down and catalog sundown towns across America In a new preface Loewen puts this history in the context of current controversies around white supremacy and the Black Lives Matter movement He revisits sundown towns and finds the number way down but with notable exceptions in exclusive all white suburbs such as Kenilworth Illinois which as of 2010 had not a single black household And although many former sundown towns are now integrated they often face second generation sundown town issues such as in Ferguson Missouri a former sundown town that is now majority black but with a majority white police force
