The Complexion of Race Roxann Wheeler, 2000 In the 1723 Journal of a Voyage up the Gambia an English narrator describes the native translators vital to the expedition's success as being Black as Coal Such a description of dark skin color was not unusual for eighteenth century Britons but neither was the statement that followed here thro Custom being Christians they account themselves White Men The Complexion of Race asks how such categories would have been possible when and how such statements came to seem illogical and how our understanding of the eighteenth century has been distorted by the imposition of nineteenth and twentieth century notions of race on an earlier period Wheeler traces the emergence of skin color as a predominant marker of identity in British thought and juxtaposes the Enlightenment's scientific speculation on the biology of race with accounts in travel literature fiction and other documents that remain grounded in different models of human variety As a consequence of a burgeoning empire in the second half of the eighteenth century English writers were increasingly preoccupied with differentiating the British nation from its imperial outposts by naming traits that set off the rulers from the ruled although race was one of these traits it was by no means the distinguishing one In the fiction of the time non European characters could still be redeemed by baptism or conversion and the British nation could embrace its mixed race progeny In Wheeler's eighteenth century we see the coexistence of two systems of racialization and

The Retreat of Scientific Racism Elazar Barkan, 1992 This fascinating study in the sociology of knowledge documents the refutation of scientific foundations for racism in Britain and the United States between the two World Wars when racial differences were no longer attributed to cultural factors Professor Barkan considers the social significance of this transformation particularly its effect on race relations in the modern world Discussing the work of the leading biologists and anthropologists who wrote between the wars he argues that the impetus for the shift in ideologies came from the inclusion of outsiders women Jews and leftists who infused greater egalitarianism into scientific discourse But even though the emerging view of race was constrained by a scientific language he shows that modern theorists were as much influenced by social and political events as were their predecessors Education, Equality and Human Rights Mike Cole,2002-11-01 First published
