

what must be laid to rest: the demands of public information and education in this major work. This explains his preoccupation with teaching and education. He understood to succeed writers and newspaper men and to make the use of the radio as questionable ideas. During the last years of his life, though laid to rest by the great body of his race and of his many physical illnesses, spoke frequently in public and over the radio, and tried to convert others to unity on the work.

"We shall believe these writings could get well under way. The volume of his collected writings is published now to carry on the work that was in store in his hand, and that is so essential to the survival of democracy."

Franz Boas, great anthropologist, scientist, teacher, was throughout his life a humble protagonist of liberty and intellectual freedom. To the day of his death in 1942, at the age of 64, he retained the full vigor of his creative and analytical mind and the desire to participate in the problems of his day.

Born in Minden, Prussia in 1878, he attended the University of Bonn, Heidelberg and Kiel. In the age of 19 he set out to Baffin Land, to make geographical and ethnological observations. There, his studies of the Eskimos opened the way for much of his future thinking and led him to his life work — the study of man, looking the freedom he saw in the ideals of American democracy. He came to the United States in 1897. He immediately turned his full energies to the field of Anthropology and became a lecturer at Clark University and subsequently Curator of Anthropology at the World's Columbian Fair, Chicago.

In 1898 he came to New York as Curator of Ethnology at the American Museum of Natural History. He taught at Columbia University and in 1899 became Professor of Anthropology. For almost half a century, he was head of this department at Columbia. He directed researchers that opened many new paths in the study of the nature of man and most of the anthropologists in this country have been his students.

He, himself, was the author of more than 400 articles and wrote many books that embodied his scientific observations. Among the best known are, The Mind of Primitive Man, Anthropology and Modern Life, and Primitive Art. His studies of Indian languages culminated in the publication of the famous three-volume Handbook of American Indian Languages. These contributed richly to anthropological studies of the Indians of America, and made deep impacts on the study of linguistics in general.

Franz Boas was most widely known for his studies on race. Through painstaking research he proved that the term "race" has no validity; that there are few true races. With a cumulative battery of scientific evidence he demolished the false concept that racial and mental characteristics of different peoples are inherited and hereditary, and demonstrated that they result from cultural and environmental influences. This conclusion was arrived at early in his work and in 1911, was incorporated in the first edition of The Mind of Primitive Man. He extended the scope of his observations and made studies of the effect of environment on bodily structure and form. He discovered that the descendants of immigrants in the United States undergo changes in bodily form and this discovery revolutionized scientific concepts as to the stability of human types.

"No longer can we keep the scientific work a province of the scholar. It is our duty to take the kind and of substantiating the facts of civilization here so that thinking be shared with us by the great and the great masses of the people."

"The 17 years until his death he continued his studies of race, and worked to distinguish between cultural patterns and innate human behavior. Through these scientific studies he disproved the prevailing theories of race; he demonstrated that there is no pure race, and showed how apparent cultural values are modified by fixed hereditary characteristics."

"During his last years, largely in a struggle of the impact of Boas and this philosophy, he became convinced of the urgent need for popular education, of the vital importance of explaining to the mass in the most effective way of our culture, and the cause of democracy, and of demonstrating the scientific basis of much of our thinking and of many of our prejudices. He turned again and again that a moral obligation to enlighten the minds of the people was an essential and obvious."

"With his conviction always laid to rest, he realized that it would take far more than his writings and those of other scientists enlightening light and truth to the people in the fundamental manner that usually governs their way of living. He felt enough with

The Subject of Race in American Science Fiction Sharon DeGraw,2006-12-19 While the connections between science fiction and race have largely been neglected by scholars racial identity is a key element of the subjectivity constructed in American SF In his Mars series Edgar Rice Burroughs primarily supported essentialist constructions of racial identity but also included a few elements of racial egalitarianism Writing in the 1930s George S Schuyler revised Burroughs normative SF triangle of white author white audience and white protagonist and promoted an individualistic highly variable concept of race instead While both Burroughs and Schuyler wrote SF focusing on racial identity the largely separate genres of science fiction and African American literature prevented the similarities between the two authors from being adequately acknowledged and explored Beginning in the 1960s Samuel R Delany more fully joined SF and African American literature Delany expands on Schuyler s racial constructionist approach to identity including gender and sexuality in addition to race Critically intertwining the genres of SF and African American literature allows a critique of the racism in the science fiction and a more accurate and positive portrayal of the scientific connections in the African American literature Connecting the popular fiction of Burroughs the controversial career of Schuyler and the postmodern texts of Delany illuminates a gradual change from a stable essentialist construction of racial identity at the turn of the century to the variable social construction of poststructuralist subjectivity today
