Re Evaluating Residential Care:

Re-evaluating Residential Care Sheila M. Peace, Leonie A. Kellaher, Dianne M. Willcocks, 1997 The authors of this timely book set out to answer this pressing question and offer an explanation as to what makes older people give up their homes Residential care homes provide accommodation for over 300 000 older people in the UK the majority of whom are in their mid eighties More than a quarter of the population over eighty five live in institutional settings most of them in residential care homes End of Life in Care Homes Jeanne Samson Katz, Sheila M. Peace, 2003-04-03 In our society the overwhelming majority of people die in later life They typically die slowly of chronic diseases with multiple co existing problems over long periods of time They spend the majority of their final years at home but many will die in hospitals or care homes This book explores the possibilities for improving the care of older people dying in residential care and nursing homes It argues that there are aspects of palliative care that given the right circumstances are transferable to dying people in settings that are not domestic or hospice based End of Life in Care Homes describes what happens in nursing and residential care homes when a resident is dying how carers cope and the practical health and emotional challenges that carers face on top of their day to day work Based on detailed research from both the UK and US the book shows how the situation can be improved Handbook of the Clinical Psychology of Ageing Robert T. Woods, Linda Clare, 2015-04-13 The first authoritative reference on clinical psychology and aging the Handbook of the Clinical Psychology of Ageing was universally regarded as a landmark publication when it was first published in 1996 Fully revised and updated the Second Edition retains the breadth of coverage of the original providing a complete and balanced picture of all areas of clinical research and practice with older people Contributions from the UK North America Scandinavia and Australia provide a broad overview of the psychology of aging psychological problems including depression anxiety psychosis and dementia the current social service context and assessment and intervention techniques Inclusive Housing in an Ageing Society Sheila M. Peace, Caroline Holland, 2001-10-24 This book is the first to bring together people from the worlds of architecture social science and housing studies to look at the future of living environments for an ageing society It uniquely moves beyond the issues of accommodation and care to look at the wider picture of how housing can reflect the social inclusion of people as they age Housing Policy in the UK David Mullins, Alan Murie, 2017-09-16 Housing Policy in the UK is a major new textbook that traces the emergence of a new comprehensive housing policy in the wake of the Communities Plan and regionalisation Grounded in cutting edge research and analysis it provides a clear account of the evolution and current dimensions and tensions at the heart of this policy Equity and Efficiency Policy in Community Care Bleddyn Davies, José Fernández, 2018-02-06 This title was first published in 2000 Equity and Efficiency Policy provides a completely new perspective on post reform community care analyzes its fairness effectiveness and efficiency in a new way and uses its powerful new techniques applied to a major national collection of evidence to suggest how to develop the Modernization

Agenda It describes for the first time how differences in the levels of each of the main services alone and in combination affect a wide range of user and carer benefits uses this knowledge to analyze in a new way and make policy proposals about some of the pressing policy issues of the government s Modernization Agenda Dementia across cultural borders

Mahin Kiwi, 2018-11-20 Introduction Today s multicultural society has resulted in major changes with healthcare undergoing significant modifications Healthcare workers and patients are increasingly confronted with cultural backgrounds other than their own The world s population is ageing and the number of people with dementia is growing resulting in a growing number of older people with a foreign background whose care needs have increased at different rates Migration does not only mean moving from one place to another it also involves the transition of an individual s lifestyle life views social and economic adjustments that may lead to certain changes These transitions from the old to the new way of life and from a life without dementia to a life with dementia involve making sense of life s changes Aim The aim of study I was to explore the experiences and perceptions of dementia among Iranian staff working in a culturally profiled nursing home CPNH The aim of studies II and III was to explore relatives decisions to end caregiving at home and Iranian families and relatives attitudes towards CPNHs in Sweden The aim of study IV was to explore how the residents with dementia at the CPNH expressed the feeling of home Method This thesis is based on more than one year s fieldwork The empirical material is based on interviews and observations Three groups of participants were interviewed and observed 10 people with dementia IV 20 family caregivers and relatives II and III respectively and 34 staff members I The interviews were conducted in Persian Farsi Azerbaijani English and Swedish The choice of language was always up to the participants All the interviews were audio recorded transcribed verbatim in the respective languages and then translated later into Swedish The analysis of the material was based on content analysis blended with ethnography Results Study I shows that people from different culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds could have different perceptions of what dementia entails A lack of knowledge concerning dementia affects how staff approach these people Study II shows that the CPNH is crucial when deciding to cease caregiving at home It is important to ensure that relatives with dementia are cared for by someone who speaks the same mother tongue The results indicate that positive feelings of relief or comfort are dominant responses among the participants some of whom even feel pride in the high standard of care provided by the home In Study III most participants based their views on a comparison between the CPNH and Iranian nursing homes after the Islamic Revolution Negative views of the nursing home were evaluated alongside what the respondents considered to be typically Iranian In Study IV the results show that people with dementia s personal experiences of home played a great role and although none of the participants felt at home all of them stated that the CPNH was a place to live in Conclusion Perceptions of dementia can be based on cultural and traditional understanding although this can shift through transition and knowledge accumulation A lack of knowledge concerning dementia and residents sociocultural background generational differences and incoherence aligned with staff members different sociocultural backgrounds created many challenges The staff wanted to learn more about dementia to be able to manage daily communication with the residents On another point the staff admitted that only being able to speak a person s native language was not enough to claim that they were actually communicating Family caregivers decisions to end caregiving at home involve mutuality capability and management but decision making sometimes has nothing to do with violating a person s autonomy and is more about protecting the person The family caregivers do care for frail elderly family members What has changed due to a transition is the structure and construction of family caregiving The consequences of communication difficulties between staff and the residents have led to a small degree of social involvement which in turn affects residents daily social state Overall many family members stated that the CPNH resembled Iran too much which disturbed them The residents thought of home as a geographical location but also connected it with both positive and negative feelings Furthermore the CPNH reminded some of the residents of the nicer side of life back home in Iran while for others it brought back sad experiences and memories from the past Nevertheless the nursing home due to memories and experiences of life in Iran home was a place to be and to live

Managing Care in Context Jeanette Henderson,Dorothy Atkinson,2003 Managing Care in Context looks at the different contexts in which care takes place and considers the impact of policy practice and organisational contexts on managers It explores the complexity and diversity of the management task and the role

Medical Identities Kent Maynard,2007 Illness and misfortune more broadly are ubiquitous thus healing roles or professions are also universal Ironically however little attention has been paid to those who heal or promote wellbeing These come in many different guises in some societies healing is highly professional and specialized in some cases it is more preventative in others more interventionist Based on rich and wide ranging ethnographic data and especially written for this volume these essays look at how a great variety of health providers are perceived from traditional healers to physicians from diviners to nursing home providers Conversely the authors also ask how healers or those concerned with wider matters of well being view themselves and to what degree social attitudes differ in regard to who these people are as well as their power prestige and activities As these essays demonstrate class gender sexuality ethnicity or state policy may all play formative roles in shaping the definition of health and wellbeing how they are delivered and the character and prestige of those who provide for our health and welfare in society

Independent Futures Colin Barnes,Geoffrey Mercer,2006-04-28 This book provides the first comprehensive review of the increase in the UK and internationally in the number of disability related support services controlled by disabled people themselves It highlights the need for greater user involvement in service provision and delivery
