A Geography of the Lifeworld (Routledge Revivals) David Seamon, 2015-06-11 Within the modern Western lifestyle increasing conflict is becoming apparent between that patchwork of isolated points such as the home or the office which are linked by a mechanical system of transportation and communication devices and a growing sense of homelessness and isolation This work first published in 1979 adopts a phenomenological perspective illustrating that this malaise may have partial roots in the deepening rupture between people and place Whereas the problems of terrestrial space may have been overcome technologically and economically it has been less successful regarding people Experience indicates that people become bound to locality and the quality of their life is thus reduced if these bonds are disrupted or broken in any way The relationship between community and place is investigated as is the opportunity for improving the environment both from a human and an ecological perspective This book will be of interest to students of human geography and perception     A Theory of Sentience Austen Clark, 2000 Austen Clark offers a general account of the forms of mental representation that we call sensory To sense something one must have some capacity to discriminate among sensory qualities but there are other requirements What are they and how can they be put together to yield full blown sensing Drawing on the findings of current neuroscience Clark proposes and defends the hypothesis that the various modalities of sensation share a generic form that he calls feature placing Sensing proceeds by picking out place times in or around the body of the sentient organism and characterizing qualities features that appear at those place times Such feature placing is a primitive kind probably the most primitive kind of mental representation Once its peculiarities have been described many of the puzzles about the intentionality of sensation and the phenomena that lead some to label it pseudo intentional can be resolved The hypothesis casts light on many other troublesome phenomena including the varieties of illusion the problem of projection the notion of a visual field the location of after images the existence of sense data and the role of perceptual demonstratives A Theory of Sentience will interest anyone interested in the topics of sensation representation or phenomenal consciousness     Design for Tomorrow—Volume 1 Amaresh Chakrabarti, Ravi Poovaiah, Prasad Bokil, Vivek come to stand in a quasi perceptual relation to qualities not originally perceived his claim that visual space is non Euclidean his answers to the questions why we see the world right side up with inverted retinal images and whether a newly sighted person would recognize by sight the shapes he previously knew by touch whether memory like perception is a form of direct awareness and how we manage to conceive of things that are utterly nonexistent Also examined are Reid s account of human knowledge by means of first principles his externalist reply to philosophical skepticism his volitional theory of action his use of the distinction between event causation and agent causation to understand freedom of the will and his criticism of Hume and anticipation of Moore on the analysis of moral judgment The most comprehensive work on Reid in a quarter century this book will be welcomed by students of early modern philosophy epistemology the philosophy of perception and the philosophy of action
