Reactions To Critical Life Events:

Reactions to Critical Life Events Marita Rohr Inglehart, 1991-07-30 People's reactions to critical life events is a topic that has stimulated basic as well as applied research by psychologists from a number of different subdisciplines. In this unique work Marita Inglehart synthesizes previous research in the field and proposes a unique way of thinking about reactions to critical life events that has important implications for much of contemporary social psychological research. The new generalized principle of cognitive consistency which integrates elements of cognitive consistency theory and attribution theory offers several significant advantages over existing theories of reactions to critical life events, particularly in terms of the contribution to our understanding of the importance of specific variables such as social support and individual differences. The study is divided into three sections and begins by reviewing and evaluating the current status of theoretical research on reactions to critical life events. The various theoretical contributions are judged against their ability to answer questions regarding the energizing and structuring components of these reactions. Part II introduces the generalized principle of cognitive consistency and explores its applications to research on reactions to critical life events. The third set of chapters demonstrates the way in which the new theory can be used to reinterpret research findings centered around the importance of moderator variables in predicting reactions to critical life events. Inglehart concludes by discussing the role of life philosophies in general and examining the practical implications for counseling of the generalized principle of cognitive consistency. An important contribution to the social psychological literature, this volume will help both to bridge the gap between basic and applied research and enhance communication between the various subdisciplines involved in investigating reactions to critical life events. Bembenutty, 2022-03-01 This volume traces the socialization process, professional development, career paths, and theory and research of contemporary pioneers in education and psychology. This volume contains interviews with leading scholars who are at the vanguard of teaching and learning. They shared how their childhood development influenced their theoretical paths and research endeavors and revealed their thoughts, beliefs, and experiences that made them who they are today. These scholars responded to questions pertaining to their childhood, initial interest in education and psychology, role models, research interests, and major findings, future directions of their research, educational implications derived from their research, and perception of their legacy. They are real people who have had experiences like anybody else but found homes and teachers who supported them. While in college, they found educators who mentored them. Readers will find that this volume offers them an opportunity to learn the background of contemporary pioneers in education and psychology, provides valuable sources where they can learn about how major theories developed and where they are moving, and reveals the personal anecdotes that influenced the conceptualization of contemporary theories and research. Educators and students will find that this book provides hope and a rejuvenated enthusiasm about the status of education and psychology and that they too can be

Where God and Science Meet Patrick McNamara Ph.D.,2006-09-30 Spiritual practices or awakenings have an impact on brain mind and personality These changes are being scientifically predicted and proven For example studies show Buddhist priests and Franciscan nuns at the peak of religious feelings show a functional change in the lobes of their brain Similar processes have been found in people with epilepsy which Hippocrates called the sacred disease New research is showing that not only does a person s brain activity change in particular areas while that person is experiencing religious epiphany but such events can be created for some people even self professed atheists by stimulating various parts of the brain In this far reaching and novel set experts from across the nation and around the world present evolutionary neuroscientific and psychological approaches to explaining and exploring religion including the newest findings and evidence that have spurred the fledgling field of neurotheology It is not the goal of neurotheology to prove or disprove the existence of God but to understand the biology of spiritual experiences Such experiences seem to exist outside time and space caused by the brain for some reason losing its perception of a boundary between physical body and outside world and could help explain other intangible events such as altered states of consciousness possessions alien visitations near death experiences and out of body events Understanding them as well as how and why these abilities evolved in the brain could also help us understand how religion contributes to survival of the human race Eminent contributors to this set help us answer questions including How does religion better our brain function What is the difference between a religious person and a terrorist who kills in the name of religion Is there one site or function in the brain necessary for religious experience

Self-related Cognitions in Anxiety and Motivation R. Schwarzer,2013-08-21 Research on anxiety and motivation has witnessed substantial progress in recent years in developing innovative perspectives and applying advanced psychometric tools The most important contributions were made by cognitively oriented psychologists who have related the information processing view to anxiety and motivation The organized knowledge about oneself and the storage processing and retrieval of information concerned with one's attitude and behavior strongly influences the way people think feel and act Therefore self referent thoughts play a major role as a cognitive component in anxiety and motivation It is the idea of this book to integrate different lines of thinking in the field of anxiety and motivation by relating both topics to self focussed attention self concept and self evaluation in achievement contexts as well as in social contexts
