

Animal Welfare Policy

Australian farmers as world leaders in animal welfare

Australian farmers value the trust that the community places in them and know that community acceptance of the way they care for animals is essential to the agriculture industry's success. The National Farmers' Federation (NFF) is committed to ongoing and transparent dialogue with the community about the management of animal welfare. Engagement with the community based on trust and transparency is a core tenet of the NFF's plan for a $100 billion agriculture sector by 2030.

Animal welfare is defined by the World Organisation for Animal Health as 'the physical and mental state of an animal in relation to the conditions in which it lives and dies'. Australian farmers strive to be recognised as global leaders in livestock management by using science-based best practice methods of husbandry based on agreed national minimum welfare standards. Animal welfare is also a legal requirement with state and territory governments responsible for regulating and enforcing minimum welfare standards.

All animals deserve to be treated with care and respect, and Australian farmers, who care for their animals, are best placed to drive continuous improvement in welfare outcomes within our industry.

The issue

The NFF, together with its members, consistently demonstrates its commitment to continuous improvement in farm animal welfare through national policy and advocacy efforts. Governments and industry must continue to build on what has been achieved, recognising the importance of adopting best practice, science-based husbandry techniques and responding to community expectations about welfare.

Key points

- An animal's welfare is good when it is healthy, well-nourished, safe, comfortable and able to express normal patterns of behaviour, as supported by unbiased scientific evidence.
- The Australian Animal Welfare Standards and Guidelines process is an effective and appropriate method for setting minimum welfare standards that are practical, science-based and developed in consultation with industry.
- The NFF supports national consistency in the regulation of animal welfare and continues to encourage the uptake of agreed standards by state and territory governments.
- Livestock producers continue to invest many millions of dollars through levies towards research, development, extension and adoption (RDE&A) to drive continuous improvement in animal welfare outcomes.
