

The background of the cover is a photograph of the interior of Duke Chapel. The image captures the lower portion of the church's interior, focusing on the intricate, dark wood-paneled vaulted ceiling. The ceiling features a complex network of ribs that create a series of pointed arches. Below the ceiling, the tops of several tall, narrow stained glass windows are visible. These windows are filled with colorful, abstract patterns in shades of red, blue, yellow, and green. The overall lighting is warm and somewhat dim, emphasizing the textures of the wood and the vibrant colors of the glass.

Decolonizing Preaching Sarah Travis, 2014-11-13 Colonialism and imperialism continue to impact the personal and social identities of North American preachers and listeners In Decolonizing Preaching Sarah Travis argues that sermons have a role in shaping the identity and ethics of listeners by helping them formulate responses to empire and colonization Travis employs postcolonial theories to provide important insights for the practice of preaching today She also turns to the social doctrine of the Trinity to offer a vision of the divine human community that effectively deconstructs colonizing discourse This book offers preachers and other practical theologians a gentle introduction to colonial history postcolonial theories and Social Trinitarian theology while equipping them with tools to decolonize preaching and strategies for preventing resisting and responding to colonizing discourse Travis effectively casts a vision of a perichoretic space in which preacher and listener encounter the living God in Trinity and are transformed reconciled and sent out to others in the church and beyond
