

A Leisure Activities Curricular Component for Severely Handicapped Youth: Why and How

Luanna M. Voeltz and James A. Apffel

The present paper presents a rationale for including a leisure time activities curriculum component in educational programming for severely handicapped children and youth. The importance of play and the constructive use of leisure time for both nonhandicapped and handicapped persons is stressed, and a review of the literature provides documentation of the multiple positive effects of a leisure repertoire upon the adaptive behavior and community adjustment of the severely handicapped. A brief description of a model demonstration project to develop an innovative leisure curriculum component is introduced, emphasizing the scope, content and purpose of such training. Finally, selection criteria which might be useful to guide future teacher and care-giver decisions in the leisure domain are presented, and the role of parents and community care-givers in cooperative planning for leisure education is emphasized.

The ability to play—to occupy oneself constructively and pleasurably during free time—appears to develop vicariously in most persons. Children seem to naturally engage in explorations of persons and materials in their environment, with the quality of those interactions increasing in complexity as the child matures. Yet, we undoubtedly underestimate the extent to which children learn and are taught to play. The various social systems to which children are exposed present numerous opportunities for leisure activities and socialization experiences associated with play. Parents clearly recognize the necessity of engaging the infant in play, and structured programs during the early childhood period carefully incorporate the time and opportunity for play and social interaction. To some extent, our historical hesitation to structure academic experiences for the very young child reflects a philosophical bias that learning in a systematic fashion must follow the kinds of exploratory interactions with the environment which are characterized as play.

The development of behavior modification principles and procedures and the ensuing research have had a dramatic impact on services for mentally retarded persons This book is the second edition of a volume that is designed to update readers on some of these many developments Although many of the chapter titles and authors from the first edition remain unchanged we have added additional chapters to reflect new areas of research The book is thus a critical review of this literature and as such provides essential and important notions about what we know and what can be done to expand our current knowledge

The authors of the chapters are all recognized experts who have been active in publishing in the research areas they critique

As a result they have a good understanding of what are the major issues in the field And because they are also active in service provision to persons with identified handicaps their material will be especially useful to practitioners and it is hoped to those professionals who are working in the field in establishing data based treatments One important change in the field has concerned the terminology used to We are aware that persons with mental retardation describe handicapped persons are no longer referred to as the mentally retarded and although no disrespect is intended for the sake of continuity the original title has been retained on the advice of the publisher
