Making Schools Work Barbara Bruns, Deon Filmer, Harry Anthony Patrinos, 2011 This book is about the threats to education quality in the developing world that cannot be explained by lack of resources It reviews the observed phenomenon of service delivery failures in public education cases where programs and policies increase the inputs to education but do not produce effective services where it counts in schools and classrooms It documents what we know about the extent and costs of such failures across low and middle income countries And it further develops the conceptual model posited in the World Development Report 2004 that a root cause of low quality and inequitable public services not only in education is the weak accountability of providers to both their supervisors and clients The central focus of the book however is a new story It is that developing countries are increasingly adopting innovative strategies to attack these problems Drawing on new evidence from 22 rigorous impact evaluations across 11 developing countries this book examines how three key strategies to strengthen accountability relationships in developing country school systems have affected school enrollment completion and student learning The book reviews the motivation and global context for education reforms aimed at strengthening provider accountability It provides the rationale and synthesizes the evidence on the impacts of three key lines of reform 1 policies that use the power of information to strengthen the ability of clients of education services students and their parents to hold providers accountable for results 2 policies that promote school based management that increase schools autonomy to make key decisions and control resources often empowering parents to play a larger role 3 teacher incentives reforms that specifically aim at making teachers more accountable for results either by making contract tenure dependent on performance or offering performance linked pay The book summarizes the lessons learned draws cautious conclusions about possible complementarities across different types of accountability focused reforms if they are implemented in tandem considers issues related to scaling up reform efforts and the political economy of reform and suggests directions for future work

The Journalism Research Fellows Report ,1981 Schools Making a Difference Martin Thrupp,1999-05-16 Does an effective school really come about through the actions of teachers and school leaders or does it also require an advantaged student intake This question reflects a longstanding research debate about whether or not the social class mix of a school s student intake has much effect on individual achievement Schools Making a Difference Let s Be Realistic presents new evidence which suggests that school mix is likely to be important because of the way many school processes are deeply influenced by student intake characteristics Low socioeconomic schools face numerous intake related constraints which make them highly resistant to improvement efforts By suggesting that failing schools are often overwhelmed rather than ineffective this book provides a sympathetic reappraisal of the performance of teachers and school leaders in such schools It also offers a critical response to the often unrealistic claims of the school effectiveness and school improvement movement and a fresh critique of market reforms in education Strategic Management in Schools and Colleges David Middlewood,Jacky Lumby,1998-04-28 This book is helpful in providing a survey of where education has reached in strategic planning in theory and practice Helpfully case studies are scattered throughout so readers can compare themselves with other schools and pick up do and don t tips Management in Education The strategies presented here are quite useful to provide future directions not only to the managers but also to the planners and trainers Journal of Education Planning and Administration This book examines the issue of strategic management in schools and colleges The contributors present an overview of theory in order to enhance management practice in education and articulate good practice on the basis of evidence in education settings The ideas presented here are derived from international research and practice and apply to all phases of education with the emphasis on using the findings to improve practice in schools and colleges
