Collaborative Ethnographic Working in Mental Health Neil Armstrong, 2023-12-07 Collaborative Ethnographic Working in Mental Health seeks to chart a new direction for research into mental healthcare with the aim of creating the conditions for more productive interdisciplinary dialogue People involved in mental health often fail to recognise how they are described by researchers from the humanities and social sciences which inhibits productive collaboration This book seeks to address this problem by including clinicians and patients in the research process and by shifting attention away from power and knowledge and towards the organisational context It explores how clinical thinking and behaviour illness experience and clinical relationships are all shaped by the bureaucratic context In particular it examines tensions between what we want from mental healthcare and how accountable bureaucracies actually work and proposes that mental healthcare research should not just evaluate new interventions but should investigate new ways of organising This book is written with a non specialist audience in mind as it is intended for all with a stake in mental healthcare research and practice It is also for those with an interest in ethnographic methods as a novel way of deploying ethnography autoethnography and coproduced ethnography to address clinically important research topics Madness, Bureaucracy and Gender in

Metatheory in Social Science Donald Winslow Fiske,Richard A. Shweder,1986-03-15 What is the nature of the social sciences What kinds of knowledge can they and should they hope to create Are objective viewpoints possible and can universal laws be discovered Questions like these have been asked with increasing urgency in recent years as some philosophers and researchers have perceived a crisis in the social sciences Metatheory in Social Science offers many provocative arguments and analyses of basic conceptual frameworks for the study of human behavior These are offered primarily by practicing researchers and are related to problems in disciplines as diverse as sociology psychology psychiatry anthropology and philosophy of science While various points of view are expressed in these nineteen essays they have in common several themes including the comparison of social and natural science the role of knowledge in meeting the demands of society and its pressing problems and the nature and role of subjectivity in science Some authors hold that subjectivity cannot be studied scientifically others argue that it can and must be if progress in knowledge is to be made The essays demonstrate the philosophical pluralism they discuss and give a wide range of alternative positions on the future of the social and behavioral sciences in a postpositivist intellectual world

Family Experiences with Mental Illness Gail Gamache, Richard Tessler, 2000-03-30 Tessler and Gamache provide substantial research on the impact of mental illness on the family through interviews conducted with hundreds of family members between 1989 and 1997 According to the authors how families experience the mental illness of a relative depends on many social factors including how public mental health services are organized and financed and whether families feel judged or supported by professionals Most family members experience a range of emotions toward one another ranging from warmth and gratification to anger and rejection Tessler and Gamache detail the family experience with mental illness in terms of both negative and positive feelings They take a holistic approach to the family experience and present a variety of family responses and dilemmas The family members whose stories are told are diverse in respect to race gender age and relationship and the demographic clinical characteristics of their relatives with mental illness Tessler and Gamache find that the amount of burden that family members experience depends in part on which dimension of burden is being addressed When burden is defined as assistance in daily living it is less than what was thought On the other hand the subjective burden associated with supervision and control is substantial Family role and residence contribute to most dimensions of burden For example a mother living with an adult son with schizophrenia will experience mental illness differently than the brother who has moved out of the family home and moved to another state In both studies a major finding involved lower than expected expenditures by family members for medication and mental health treatment in both studies Most expenditures were focused instead on personal or survival needs which for a sub sample of family members involves considerable expenditures This work is an important research finding for scholars students and professionals involved with social work public health and public mental health policy

Qualitative Research In Health Care Holloway, Immy, 2005-06-01 This edited text on qualitative research methods in health is aimed at a multi professional multi disciplinary audience It explains qualitative methods applied specifically to health care research and draws extensively on European examples

Everyday Ethics Paul Brodwin, 2013-01-01 This book explores the moral lives of mental health clinicians serving the most marginalized individuals in the US healthcare system Drawing on years of fieldwork in a community psychiatry outreach team Brodwin traces the ethical dilemmas and everyday struggles of front line providers On the street in staff room debates or in private confessions these psychiatrists and social workers confront ongoing challenges to their self image as competent and compassionate advocates At times they openly question the coercion and forced dependency built into the current system of care At other times they justify their use of extreme power in the face of loud opposition from clients This in depth study exposes the fault lines in today s community psychiatry It shows how people working deep inside the system struggle to maintain their ideals and manage a chronic sense of futility Their commentaries about the obligatory and the forbidden also suggest ways to bridge formal bioethics and the realities of mental health practice The experiences of these clinicians pose a single overarching question how should we bear responsibility for the most vulnerable among us

The Handbook of Mental Health and Space Laura McGrath,Paula Reavey,2018-09-19 The Handbook of Mental Health and Space brings together the psychosocial work on experiences of space and mental distress making explicit the links between theoretical work and clinical and community practice The change from an institutional to community care model of mental health services can be seen as a fundamental spatial change in the lives of service users and the book aims to to stimulate discussion about mental healthcare spaces and their design With contributions from those involved in theorizing space those drawing on their own experiences of distress and space as well as practitioners working on the ground the book will be of interest to mental health practitioners and academics

Talking Back to Psychiatry
Linda J. Morrison, 2013-09-13

Linda Morrison brings the voices and issues of a little known complex social movement to the attention of sociologists, mental health professionals and the general public. The members of this social movement work to gain voice for their own experience, to raise consciousness of injustice and inequality, to expose the darker side of psychiatry and to promote alternatives for people in emotional distress. Talking Back to Psychiatry explores the movement's history, its complex membership, its strategies and goals, and the varied response it has received from psychiatry, policy makers and the public at large.
