migrants and non migrants Based on fieldwork in Adigrat and Addis Ababa it focuses on these young people s notions of progress experiences of higher education and ethnic tensions to demonstrate how their movements enabled them to enhance their economic social and symbolic capital while their cultural capital remained largely unchanged The book provides new insights into the opportunities and constraints for upward social mobility and argues that the emergence of shared characteristics among urban to urban migrants led to the formation of a group that can be described as a middle class in Ethiopia media attention Today the new middle classes are about to take centre stage too With their lifestyles and attitudes the new middle classes are considered to be both the products as well as the promoters of globalization They are a highly heterogeneous group in socio economic terms as well as in habits and preferences including their societal role as consumers and citizens The first wave of scholarly and political attention can be traced back to the mid nineties The focal point was surprise and unease about indubitable symptoms of consumerism which until then had been seen as a characteristic of the richest western societies However since the nineties consumerism has run rampant in developing countries too

This has particularly been noted with respect to the emerging middle classes in South East Asia The will to consume seemed inexhaustible and appetites insatiable This rage to consume was both celebrated and feared by political leaders and other social moral gatekeepers who began to condemn the process as Westernization and even westernization Chua 2000 xii Ever since the debate about the lifestyles of the new middle classes and their role in society has gained momentum
