Making Models:

Breaking and Making Models Christoph F. E. Holzhey ,Marietta Kesting,Claudia Peppel,2025-05-20 Practically anything can be a model of or for something else What characterizes models is rather their specific reductive relationality which often promotes understanding but is always generative rather than merely representational The essays in Breaking and Making Models engage with the normative and performative qualities of models their aesthetic and political dimensions and their world making potentials Bringing such perspectives into a broad interdisciplinary dialogue this book explores ways to work creatively with models administrative ethics from other fields such as sociology psychology and philosophy this reference provides a comprehensive review of administrative ethics in the public sector Detailing the context within which contemporary ethics training has developed the book examines the effectiveness of ethics training legal and organizational devices for encouraging desired conduct and other topics of particular relevance to the political and social contexts of public administration Written by over 25 leading scholars in public administration ethics the book creates a taxonomy for administrative ethics using the categories of modern philosophy Optimization Models Using Fuzzy Sets and Possibility Theory J. Kacprzyk,S.A. Orlovski,2013-11-11 Optimization is of central concern to a number of discip lines Operations Research and Decision Theory are often consi dered to be identical with optimizationo But also in other areas such as engineering design regional policy logistics and many others the search for optimal solutions is one of the prime goals The methods and models which have been used over the last decades in these areas have primarily been hard or crisp i.e. the solutions were considered to be either feasible or unfeasible either above a certain aspiration level or below This dichotomous structure of methods very often forced the modeller to approximate real problem situations of the more or less type by yes or no type models the solutions of which might turn out not to be the solutions to the real problems This is particularly true if the problem under consideration includes vaguely defined relationships human evaluations uncertainty due to inconsistent or incomplete evidence if natural language has to be modelled or if state variables can only be described approximately Until recently everything which was not known with certainty i.e. which was not known to be either true or false or which was not known to either happen with certainty or to be impossible to occur was modelled by means of probabilities This holds in particular for uncertainties concerning the occurrence of events

How Psychiatrists Make Decisions Douglas W. Heinrichs, 2025-04-24 In an age of scientific psychiatry and evidenced based medicine the judgement of the psychiatric clinician in treating an individual patient has been devalued as the art of medicine as opposed to science with reduced evidentiary value The clinician is asked to apply the results of formal research studies of groups of patients the patient reduced to a token of a type the latter usually defined by diagnosis Yet the limits of formal research to guide the treatment of the unique individual requires clinical judgments where there is little formal guidance while the clinician's deliberations are devalued as necessary but of questionable validity This dilemma has been encouraged by the tacit nature of the way clinicians reach decisions In this book Heinrichs makes explicit the underlying methodology of the clinical reasoning of experienced psychiatrists Starting with a detailed phenomenological examination of specific cases he argues that this methodology involves constructing models of each individual patient composed of patterns of propensities and their interaction POP models From this rational interventions can be hypothesized and predictions generated and tested The nature and characteristics of this modelling procedure is described in detail By making the model explicit clinicians can more critically assess their work Such models can also play a valuable role in educating clinical trainees This is discussed using recent work of cognitive scientists studying how expertise is developed across disciplines where considerable ambiguity and complexity exist From this specific recommendations follow for applying POP models in training settings to help turn novices into experts Finally the book challenges the devaluing of clinical judgment about individual patients by examining contemporary developments in the philosophy of science Problems with the hypothetico deductive view of science led to a naturalistic exploration of science Model construction to represent concrete pieces of reality to solve concrete problems has emerged as the fundamental process in science as practiced across all scientific disciplines POP modelling simply constitutes this process in psychiatry Hence when properly understood and rigorous applied clinical reasoning is a fully scientific process and merits high epistemological credibility
