Medicine that Walks Maureen K. Lux, 2001-12-15 In this seminal work Maureen Lux takes issue with the biological invasion theory of the impact of disease on Plains Aboriginal people She challenges the view that Aboriginal medicine was helpless to deal with the diseases brought by European newcomers and that Aboriginal people therefore surrendered their spirituality to Christianity Biological invasion Lux argues was accompanied by military cultural and economic invasions which combined with the loss of the bison herds and forced settlement on reserves led to population decline The diseases killing the Plains people were not contagious epidemics but the grinding diseases of poverty malnutrition and overcrowding Medicine That Walks provides a grim social history of medicine over the turn of the century It traces the relationship between the ill and the well from the 1880s when Aboriginal people were perceived as a vanishing race doomed to extinction to the 1940s when they came to be seen as a disease menace to the Canadian public Drawing on archival material ethnography archaeology epidemiology ethnobotany and oral histories Lux describes how bureaucrats missionaries and particularly physicians explained the high death rates and continued ill health of the Plains people in the quasi scientific language of racial evolution that inferred the survival of the fittest The Plains people's poverty and ill health were seen as both an inevitable stage in the struggle for civilization and as further evidence that assimilation was the only path to good health The people lived and coped with a cruel set of circumstances but they survived in large part because they consistently demanded a role in their own health and recovery Painstakingly researched and convincingly argued this work will change our understanding of a significant era in western Canadian history Winner of the 2001 Clio Award Prairies Region presented by the Canadian Historical Association and the 2002 Jason A Hannah Medal
