Research in Basic Writing Martin Jacobi, Michael G. Moran, 1990-02-15 This reference handbook surveys research on the central issue associated with the teaching of unprepared writers Though basic writing has only been recognized as a distinct area of teaching and research since 1975 the existing bibliographic texts already seem limited due to their age or lack of annotation This volume provides current and extensive bibliographic essays and will help to define this new field of study for teachers and researchers Following an introduction that summarizes the origins and significant texts in basic writing the book is divided into three sections Social Science Perspectives Linguistic Perspectives and Pedagogical Perspectives The first section which contains three essays views the field through the lens of social psychological and political issues The second section also containing three essays examines contributions made from studies of grammar dialects and second language acquisition The third section in its four essays focuses on the design development administration and evaluation of basic writing courses the use of computers in basic writing classrooms the role of the writing lab and the preparation of basic writing teachers An appendix that reviews current textbooks for basic writing courses is also included as well as an index This book will be a valuable resource for teachers of basic writing in education courses and workshops that train teachers and tutors and in fields such as linguistics technical writing and Teaching English as a Second Language It will also be an important addition to public and university libraries and many education programs Sentence Dynamics: an English Skills Workbook

Dynamic Emotional Communication Wataru Sato,Eva G. Krumhuber,Tjeerd Jellema,Justin H. G. Williams,2020-02-12 This eBook aims to deepen our understanding of emotional communication by introducing dynamic perspectives Facial and bodily expressions of emotion functions as indispensable communicative signals for human beings People decode the emotional information conveyed by facial bodily expressions and use this to coordinate cooperative or competitive social relationships Experimental psychological research has long investigated these important means of emotional communication However this was typically done by using static stimuli of facial bodily expressions to assess the detection and interpretation of emotions This paradigm was also adopted in neuropsychological neurophysiological and neuroimaging studies Although researchers accumulated valuable information regarding the psychological and neural mechanisms underlying these processes the static nature of the stimuli may have resulted in important phenomena remaining unexamined Recently scientists have begun to explore dynamic emotional communication in particular by using dynamic facial bodily expressions of emotion instead of static photographs as stimuli This is having important consequences for emotion research As dynamic emotional expressions have increased ecological validity and as there are differences in the visual processing of dynamic and static information a host of novel aspects of the psychological and neural processing of emotional expressions have been elucidated For example it has been shown that motor resonance and the recruitment of motor areas are fundamental to dynamic emotional communication Researchers have also started to investigate the encoding of dynamic emotional interactions and have clarified the messages embedded in the temporal aspects and the patterns of reciprocal inter individual coordination Moreover investigations of dynamic emotional communication have identified heretofore unrecognized impairments in the social functioning of individuals with psychiatric disorders such as autism spectrum disorder and schizophrenia
