The Death of Our Planet's Species Martin Gorke, 2013-02-22 The present rate and extent of species extinction estimated by some scientists as one species every 20 minutes are unprecedented in the history of mankind. Human activities are responsible for nearly all species loss yet ethical aspects of this crisis are rarely mentioned. Any concern expressed tends to be over potentially valuable resources information for scientists or compounds that could be used in new medicines that are lost when a species disappears. In The Death of Our Planet's Species Martin Gorke argues that such a utilitarian perspective is not only shortsighted but morally bankrupt. Holding doctoral degrees in both ecology and philosophy Gorke is uniquely qualified to examine the extinction crisis from both scientific and philosophical perspectives. He offers a wide ranging review of the literature on the subject drawing together those two lines of reasoning that are almost always pursued separately. After critical examination of the current state of relevant ecological knowledge Gorke presents a carefully considered case for attributing intrinsic value to all of nature including all species. At the heart of his argument is an analysis of the concept of morality. According to this analysis the universal character of morality does not permit us to establish limits of moral considerability. More precisely every act of exclusion from the moral community is an arbitrary act and is not compatible with a moral point of view The Death of Our Planet's Species sets forth a sound and original argument about the philosophical and ethical dimensions of species conservation Throughout the author combines a high level of theoretical sophistication with clear and straightforward writing Originally published in German this Island Press edition makes The Death of Our Planet's Species available for the first time to English speaking experts and lay readers Broughton's Monthly Planet Reader

Making Animals Public Professor Gay Hawkins,Dr Ben Dibley,2024-06-01 Natural history television on the ABC has been one of the public broadcaster's most popular formats For many viewers TV has been an important contact zone for engaging with animals they would never encounter in everyday life These animals have also played a critical role in developing environmental awareness But how did animals get to be on the small screen and what happened to them when they got there Making Animals Public Inside the ABC's Natural History Archive traces the cultural and political evolution of the natural history animal on the ABC It explores different modes of capture from cages to cameras what has come to count as a natural history animal over time and the various sites they have inhabited from nature to the nation to the environment to the planet In early natural history programs audiences were invited to watch as sovereign humans there to learn or be entertained by animals that were exotic or aesthetic or scientifically interesting Whatever the framing these animals were resolutely other In recent times natural history animals have become more assertive They are now posing uncomfortable questions to human viewers about exploitation extinction and mutual implication in catastrophic whole earth processes like climate change Using a wide range of screen examples ranging from the 1950s to the 2020s Making Animals Public focuses on shifting cultural and sociotechnical practices in ABC natural history television Combining science and technology studies screen studies and critical animal studies this book develops an innovative interdisciplinary analysis of how televisual animality is crafted and made believable Making Animals Public analyses the significant role public television has played in filming and circulating a vast array of animals and habitats that had never been seen before How these animals were visualised and accounted for has continually evolved What has remained constant is the fact that natural history television has been a hugely important site for exploring the various politics of human animal relations good and bad and for nurturing environmental awareness in audiences

Richard A. Proctor, 1872 Planetary Social Thought Nigel Clark, Bronislaw Szerszynski, 2020-10-22 The Anthropocene has emerged as perhaps the scientific concept of the new millennium Going further than earlier conceptions of the human environment relationship Anthropocene science proposes that human activity is tipping the whole Earth system into a new state with unpredictable consequences Social life has become a central ingredient in the dynamics of the planet itself How should the social sciences respond to the opportunities and challenges posed by this development In this innovative book Clark and Szerszynski argue that social thinkers need to revise their own presuppositions about the social to understand it as the product of a dynamic planet self organizing over deep time They outline planetary social thought a transdisciplinary way of thinking social life with and through the Earth Using a range of case studies they show how familiar social processes can be radically recast when looked at through a planetary lens revealing how the world transforming powers of human social life have always depended on the forging of relations with the inhuman potentialities of our home planet Presenting a social theory of the planetary this book will be essential reading for students and scholars interested in humanity's relation to the changing Earth
