Prime Ministerial Power in Canada Patrice Dutil,2017-06-09 Many Canadians lament that prime ministerial power has become too concentrated since the 1970s This book contradicts this view by demonstrating how prime ministerial power was centralized from the very beginning of Confederation and that the first three important prime ministers Macdonald Laurier and Borden channelled that centralizing impulse to adapt to the circumstances they faced Using a variety of innovative approaches Patrice Dutil focuses on the managerial philosophies of each of the prime ministers as well as their rapport with senior public servants resistance to genuine public sector reform and use of orders in council to further their aims He then compares their managerial habits during times of crisis to those during ordinary times This is the first book to examine the administrative habits of these three prime ministers In it Dutil offers revealing insights into the evolution of prime ministerial power He also shows how this centralizing grip of these early first ministers inevitably shaped the administrations they headed as well as those that followed

Australia's Nuclear Policy Michael Clarke, Stephan Frühling, 2016-03-03

Australia's Nuclear Policy Reconciling Strategic Economic and Normative Interests critically re evaluates Australia's engagement with nuclear weapons nuclear power and the nuclear fuel cycle since the dawn of the nuclear age The authors develop a holistic conception of nuclear policy that extends across the three distinct but related spheres strategic economic and normative that have arisen from the basic dual use dilemma of nuclear technology Existing scholarship on Australia's nuclear policy has generally grappled with each of these spheres in isolation In a fresh evaluation of the field the authors investigate the broader aims of Australian nuclear policy and detail how successive Australian governments have engaged with nuclear issues since 1945 Through its holistic approach the book demonstrates the logic of seemingly conflicting policy positions at the heart of Australian nuclear policy including simultaneous reliance on US extended deterrence and the pursuit of nuclear disarmament Such apparent contradictions highlight the complex relationships between different ends and means of nuclear policy How successive Australian governments of different political shades have attempted to reconcile these in their nuclear policy over time is a central part of the history and future of Australia's engagement with the nuclear fuel cycle

Australia-China Relations post 1949 Yi Wang, 2016-04-08 This book challenges the common perceptions of Australian dependence upon great power allies in the conduct of its foreign relations through a critical examination of Australia's relations with the People's Republic of China The author focuses on the economic and political dimensions of the policy making process from the founding of the PRC in 1949 to the present era against an analytical framework that takes into account both internal and external factors in the formulation and implementation of Australian foreign policy Informed by political science and international relations the book differs from the conventional literature on Sino Australian relations which has either focused on pure economic analysis or concentrated on chronicling historical events The author weaves theoretical insights from political science and international relations into the historical analysis while seeking to examine the interplay between political and economic factors over time in shaping policy outcomes The book draws not only on primary and secondary sources but also on information and insights obtained from interviews with a vast array of direct participants in the policy process including almost all the former ambassadors from both China and Australia covering the entire period of the diplomatic relationship As a result the book breaks new ground especially from the Hawke era onwards revealing hitherto overlooked details of interest in the policy process
