Baker, 2018-05-08 First published in 2005 Written as an account of the Percy Sladen Trust Expeditions to the New Hebrides in 1922, 1923 and 1927 this is one of the first detailed studies of the flora and fauna of these distant islands Fully illustrated with maps and figures this book describes the native Hebrideans and the reasons for their depopulation The author a biologist and zoologist details the insect avian and mammalian inhabitants of the islands and their behaviours Man and Animals in the New Hebrides John Randal Baker, Percy Sladen trust expeditions to the New Hebrides, 1922-23 and 1927, 1929 The Megalithic Culture of Melanesia Alphonse Riesenfeld, 1950 Parasites of Man and Animals in Hawaii J. E. Alicata, 1969-07-07 The South Seas in the Modern World Felix M. Keesing, 2025-05-01 The South Seas in the Modern World 1942 surveys the economic social educational and strategic problems facing the islands of the Pacific dependencies on the eve of the Second World War The ways of living that met the needs of the islanders had been disrupted by the arrival of white traders and missionaries carrying with them new diseases causing economic distress and social chaos As Island societies began to stabilise global war waged by distant colonial powers caused repercussions across the region The Domestication and Exploitation of Plants and Animals G. W. Dimbleby, 2017-07-12 The domestication of plants and animals was one of the greatest steps forward taken by mankind Although it was first achieved long ago we still need to know what led to it and how and even when it took place Only when we have this understanding will we be able to appreciate fully the important social and economic consequences of this step Even more important an understanding of this achievement is basic to any insight into modern man's relationship to his habitat In the last decade or two a change in methods of investigating these events has taken place due to the mutual realization by archaeologists and natural scientists that each held part of the key and neither alone had the whole Inevitably perhaps the floodgate that was opened has resulted in a spate of new knowledge which is scattered in the form of specialist reports in diverse journals This volume results from presentations at the Institute of Archaeology London University discussing the domestication and exploitation of plants and animals Workers in the archaeological anthropological and biological fields attempted to bridge the gap between their respective disciplines through personal contact and discussion Modern techniques and the result of their application to the classical problems of domestication selection and spread of cereals and of cattle were discussed but so were comparable problems in plants and animals not previously considered in this context Although there were differing opinions on taxonomic classification the editors have standardized and simplified the usage throughout this book In particular they have omitted references to authorities and adopted the binomial classification for both botanical and zoological names They followed this procedure in all cases except where sub specific differences are discussed and also standardized orthography of sites Naturalist Histories Jamon Alex Halvaksz, Joshua A. Bell, 2024-03-31 From early explorers to contemporary scientists naturalists have examined island flora and fauna of Oceania discovering new species carefully documenting the lives of animals and creating work central to the image of Oceania These discoveries and exploratory moves have had profound local and global impacts Often however local knowledge and communities are silent in the ethologies and histories that naturalists produce This volume analyzes the ways that Indigenous and non Indigenous naturalists have made island natures visible to a wider audience their relationship with the communities where they work as well as the unique natures that they explore and help make In staking out an area of naturalist histories each contributor addresses the relationship between naturalists and Oceanic communities how these histories shaped past and present place and practices the influence on conservations and development projects and the relationship between scientific and indigenous knowledge The essays span across colonial and postcolonial frames tracing shifts in biological practice from the eighteenth and nineteenth century focus on taxonomy and discovery to the twentieth century disciplinary restructurings and new collecting strategies and contemporary concerns with biodiversity loss conservation and knowledge formation The production of scientific knowledge is typically seen in ethnographic accounts as oppositional contrasting Indigenous and western local and global objective and subjective Such dichotomous views reinforce differences and further exaggerate inequities in the production of knowledge More dangerously value distinctions become embedded in discussions of Indigenous identity rights and sovereignty Contributors acknowledge that these dichotomous narratives have dominated the approach of the scientific community while informing how social scientists have understood the contributions of Pacific communities The essays offer a nuanced gradient as historical narratives of scientific investigation in dialogue with local histories and reveal greater levels of participation in the creation of knowledge The volume highlights how power infuses the scientific endeavor and offers a distinct and diverse view of knowledge production in Oceania Combining senior and emerging international scholars the collection will be of interest to researchers in the social sciences history as well as biology and allied fields

Women of the Place Margaret Jolly, 2014-06-11 Women of the Place is a study of gender relations in the kastom communities of South Pentecost Vanuatu It considers kastom in these communities not as an eternal tradition but rather as a way of life an identity in relation and in resistance to the forces of European development The way in which Christian missions the labour trade and the development of Western political institutions had a divergent impact on women and men is explored The relations between persons and things is highlighted in an examination of the myths and rituals of the life cycle and of grade taking The significance of this ritual is located in the context of colonial history particularly the impact of pacification on men Finally the book considers more generally kastom and gender in the post colonial state
