Measures of Community Resilience for Local Decision Makers National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine,Policy and Global Affairs,Resilient America Roundtable,Committee on Processes and Objectives for Community Measures of Resilience,2017-03-16 The 2012 National Research Council report Disaster Resilience A National Imperative identified the development and use of resilience measures as critical to building resilient communities Although many kinds of resilience measures and measuring tools have and continue to be developed very few communities consistently use them as part of their planning or resilience building efforts Since federal or top down programs to build resilience often yield mixed results bottom up approaches are needed but are often difficult for communities to implement alone A major challenge for many communities in developing their own approaches to resilience measures is identifying a starting point and defining the process Other challenges include lack of political will due to competing priorities and limited resources finite time and staff to devote to developing resilience measures lack of data availability and or inadequate data sharing among community stakeholders and a limited understanding of hazards and or risks Building on existing work the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine organized a workshop in July 2015 to facilitate the exchange of knowledge and information about ways to advance the development and implementation of resilience measures by and within diverse communities Participants worked to gain a better understanding of the challenges these communities face in the pursuit of resilience and determine whether the approach used during this workshop can help guide communities in their efforts to build their own measures of resilience This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop
