RELATING EVENTS IN NARRATIVE: A CROSSLINGUISTIC DEVELOPMENTAL STUDY. Ruth A. Berman and Dan I. Slobin (Eds.). Hillsdale, NJ: Erlbaum, 1994. Pp. xiv + 748. $99.95 cloth.

To investigate whether different languages provide different means to relate experiences, the study reported in the present volume had speakers of five different languages (English, German, Spanish, Hebrew, and Turkish) tell a story on the basis of an ordered set of 24 pictures, entitled Frog, Where Are You? In each language, 3-, 5-, and 9-year-old children and adults were included as subjects, as well as a group of 4-year-old English, Spanish, and Hebrew speakers. By making a comparison among these age groups, the differences in how children acquire narrative competence in different languages was examined.

Comprehensive in its own right, this study forms part of a larger crosslinguistic comparison, in which a total of more than 80 projects is being carried out across the globe, involving native speakers of some 42 languages and a variety of bilingual populations as well as subjects with language impairments. Each of these studies uses Frog, Where Are You? as task input.

The specific objectives of this study are to chart the development of linguistic form in children's language. Examples of the linguistic forms considered here are tense and aspect, voice (active/passive), and syntactic constructions such as relative and complement clauses. Moreover, the authors assess how these forms are used for certain narrative functions such as the temporal ordering of events, narrative perspective, and hierarchical organization of the text into main and subordinate components.

The study of how form and function interact in a language is of interest because it may reveal a dependence of the thoughts we express, the information we exchange, and the possibilities and constraints provided by the language we use. The authors of this volume invoke the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis to discuss the implications of their work: Is our thinking shaped or determined by linguistic features and, if so, do members of different language communities therefore think differently? The authors rightfully choose to consider a more modest proposal: The thoughts that constitute speaking in a language may be particular to the linguistic features of that language. As far as the construction of narratives is concerned, our attention may be therefore channeled toward those semantic distinctions that happen to be grammatically marked. For instance, English and German possess a wide variety of means to describe movement, whereas Hebrew, Spanish, and Turkish have a more constrained set of forms available. Does this result in more "dynamic" narratives in the former group of languages? From the adult narratives considered in this study, it appears, as other scholars have also suggested, that language users are inventive, circumventing the constraints imposed by their native language.

This study also reveals that children seem to be reluctant to acquire linguistic forms that are relatively complex in their language. Because there are few ways to construct relative clauses in Hebrew and Spanish, for instance, the younger speakers of those languages use relative clauses more frequently than their peers from the other three language communities, who need

Relating Events In Narrative A Crosslinguistic Developmental Study:

Relating Events in Narrative Ruth A. Berman, Dan Isaac Slobin, 2013-06-17 This volume represents the culmination of an extensive research project that studied the development of linguistic form function relations in narrative discourse. It is unique in the extent of data which it analyzes more than 250 texts from children and adults speaking five different languages and in its crosslinguistic typological focus. It is the first book to address the issue of how the structural properties and rhetorical preferences of different native languages (English, German, Spanish, Hebrew, and Turkish) impinge on narrative abilities across different phases of development. The work of Berman and Slobin and their colleagues provides insight into the interplay between shared possibly universal patterns in the developing ability to create well constructed globally organized narratives among preschoolers from three years of age compared with school children and adults contrasted against the impact of typological and rhetorical features of particular native languages on how speakers express these abilities in the process of relating events in narrative. This volume also makes a special contribution to the field of language acquisition and development by providing detailed analyses of how linguistic forms come to be used in the service of narrative functions such as the expression of temporal relations of simultaneity and retrospection, perspective taking on events and textual connectivity. To present this information the authors prepared in depth analyses of a wide range of linguistic systems including tense aspect marking, passive and middle voice, locative and directional predications, connectivity markers, null subjects and relative clause constructions. In contrast to most work in the field of language acquisition, this book focuses on developments in the use of these early forms in extended discourse beyond the initial phase of early language development. The book offers a pioneering approach to the interactions between form and function in the development and use of language from a typological linguistic perspective. The study is based on a large crosslinguistic corpus of narratives elicited from preschool, school age and adult subjects. All of the narratives were elicited by the same picture storybook Frog Where Are You by Mercer Mayer. An appendix lists related studies using the same storybook in 50 languages. The findings illuminate both universal and language specific patterns of development providing new insights into questions of language and thought.

Relating Events in Narrative Ruth Aronson Berman, Dan Isaac Slobin, 1994-01-01 Relating Events in Narrative, Volume 2 Ludo Verhoeven, Sven Stromqvist, 2004-02-13 Relating Events in Narrative Volume 2: Typological and Contextual Perspectives edited by Sven Strömqvist and Ludo Verhoeven is the much anticipated follow up volume to Ruth Berman and Dan Slobin's successful Frog story studies book Relating Events in Narrative: A Crosslinguistic Developmental Study 1994. Working closely with Ruth Berman and Dan Slobin, the new editors have brought together a wide range of scholars who inspired by the 1994 book have all used Mercer Mayer's Frog Where Are You as a basis for their research. The new book which is divided into two parts features a broad linguistic and cultural diversity. Contributions focusing on crosslinguistic perspectives make up the first part of the book. This part is concluded by Dan Slobin with an analysis and overview discussion.

development in literate societies in its broadest sense Contributors offer a personal tribute to Liliana Tolchinsky in the opening section Social interaction, Social Context, and Language Dan Isaac Slobin, Julie Gerhardt, Amy Kyratzis, Jiansheng Guo, 2014-07-10 This collection of essays is a representative sample of the current research and researchers in the fields of language and social interactions and social context The opening chapter entitled Context in Language is written by Susan Ervin Tripp whose diverse and innovative research inspired the editors to dedicate this book to her honor Ervin Tripp is known for her work in the fields of linguistics psychology child development sociology anthropology rhetoric and women s studies She has played a central role in the definition and establishment of psycholinguistics child language development and sociolinguistics and has been an innovator in terms of approaches and methods of study This book covers a wide range of research interests in the field from linguistically oriented approaches to social and ethnography oriented approaches The issue of the relationships between forms and structures of language and social interactions is examined in studies of both adult and child speech It is a useful anthology for graduate students studying language and social interaction as well as for researchers in this field Crosslinguistic Approaches to the Psychology of Language Jiansheng Guo, Elena Lieven, Nancy Budwig, Susan Ervin-Tripp, Keiko Nakamura, Seyda Ozcaliskan, 2010-10-18 Inspired by the pioneering work of Dan Slobin this volume discusses language learning from a crosslinguistic perspective integrates language specific factors in narrative skill covers the major theoretical issues and explores the relationship between language and cognition Space in Languages Maya Hickmann, Stéphane Robert, 2006-01-01 Space is presently the focus of much research and debate across disciplines including linguistics anthropology psychology and philosophy One strong feature of this collection is to bring together theoretical and empirical contributions from these varied scientific traditions with the collective aim of addressing fundamental questions at the forefront of the current literature the nature of space in language the linguistic relativity of space the relation between spatial language and cognition Linguistic analyses highlight the multidimensional and heterogeneous nature of space while also showing the existence of a set of types parameters and principles organizing the considerable diversity of linguistic systems and accounting for mechanisms of diachronic change Findings concerning spatial perception and cognition suggest the existence of two distinct systems governing linguistic and non linguistic representations that only partially overlap in some pathologies but they also show the strong impact of language specific factors on the course of language acquisition and cognitive development Narrative Development in a Multilingual Context Ludo Th Verhoeven, Sven Strömquist, 2001-01-01 In this volume the results of a number of empirical studies of the development of narrative construction within a multilingual context are presented and discussed It is explored what operating principles underlie the process of narrative production in L1 and L2 Developmental relations between form and function will be studied across a broad range of functional categories such as temporality perspective connectivity and narrative coherence Moreover a variety of language contact situations is considered with broad variation in the typological distances between the languages in order to enable cross linguistic comparison The analysis of learner data in various cross linguistic settings may thus offer new information on the role of the structural properties of unrelated languages on the process of narrative acquisition In the present volume an attempt is also made to find out how transfer from one language to the other is facilitated Finally the effects of input on narrative construction in children s first and second language are examined in several studies

Acquisition and Development of Hebrew Ruth A. Berman, 2016-08-25 The volume addresses developing knowledge and use of Hebrew from the dual perspective of typologically specific factors and of shared cross linguistic trends aimed at providing an overview of acquisition in a single language from infancy to adolescence while also shedding light on key issues in the field as a whole Essentially non partisan in approach the collection includes distinct approaches to language and language acquisition formal universalist pragmatic usage based cognitive constructivist and deals with a range of topics not often addressed within a single volume phonological perception and production inflectional and derivational morphology simple clause structure and complex syntax early and later literacy writing systems with data deriving from varied research methodologies interactive conversations and extended discourse adult input and child output longitudinal and cross sectional corpora structured elicitations Each chapter provides background information on Hebrew specific facets of the topic of concern but typically avoids ethno centrality by relating to more general issues in the domain The book should thus prove interesting and instructive for linguists psychologists and educators and for members of the child language research community both within and beyond the confines of Hebrew language expertise

Variation and Change in the Encoding of Motion Events Juliana Goschler, Anatol Stefanowitsch, 2013-11-14 The linguistic typology of motion event encoding is one of the central topics in Cognitive Linguistics A vast body of typological contrastive and psycholinguistic research has shown the potential but also the limitations of the original distinction between verb framed and satellite framed languages This volume contains ten original papers focusing specifically on the variation and change of motion event encoding in individual languages and language families The authors show that some of the central claims about motion event encoding need careful re examination and reformulation and that individual languages and language families are more variable across space and time than even a refined typology could neatly capture at this time The volume thus contributes to a more detailed and fine grained foundation for the investigation of conceptual causes and consequences of different motion event encoding strategies

Children's Discourse Maya Hickmann, 2002-11-21 This comparative study explores two central questions in the study of first language acquisition What is the relative impact of structural and functional determinants What is universal versus language specific during development Maya Hickmann addresses these questions in three domains of child language reference to entities the representation of space and uses of temporal aspectual markings She provides a thorough review of different theoretical approaches to language acquisition and a wide range of developmental research as well as examining all three domains in English French German and Chinese narratives Hickmann s findings concern the rhythm of acquisition the interplay among different factors syntactic semantic pragmatic determining children's uses and universal versus variable aspects of acquisition Her conclusions stress the importance of relating sentence and discourse determinants of acquisition in a crosslinguistic perspective Children's Discourse will be welcomed by those working in psychology and language related disciplines interested in first language acquisition

New Directions in Cognitive Linguistics Vyvyan Evans, Stéphanie Pourcel, 2009-06-24 Nearly three decades since the publication of the seminal Metaphors We Live By Cognitive Linguistics is now a mature theoretical and empirical enterprise with a voluminous associated literature It is arguably the most rapidly expanding school in modern linguistics and one of the most exciting areas of research within the interdisciplinary project known as cognitive science As such Cognitive Linguistics is increasingly attracting a broad readership both within linguistics as well as from neighbouring disciplines including other cognitive and social sciences and from disciplines within the humanities This volume contains over 20 papers by leading experts in cognitive linguistics which survey the state of the art and new directions in cognitive linguistics The volume is divided into 5 sections covering all the traditional areas of study in cognitive linguistics as well as newer areas including applications and extensions Sections include Approaches to semantics Approaches to metaphor and blending Approaches to grammar Language embodiment and cognition Extensions and applications of cognitive linguistics

The Crosslinguistic Study of Language Acquisition Dan Isaac Slobin, 2014-03-05 In this final volume in the series the contributors attempt to expand the contexts in which child language has been examined crosslinguistically The chapters build on themes that have been touched on anticipated and promised in earlier volumes in the series The study of child language has been situated in the disciplines of psychology and linguistics and has been most responsive to dominant issues in those fields such as nativism and learning comprehension and production errors input and universals of morphology and syntax The context has primarily been that of the individual child interacting with a parent and deciphering the linguistic code The code has been generally treated in these volumes as a system of morphology and syntax with little attention to phonology and prosody Attention has been paid occasionally to the facts that the child is acquiring language in a sociocultural setting and that language is used in contexts of semantic and pragmatic communication In addition there has been a degree of attention paid to the interactions between language and cognition in the process of development As for individual differences between children they have been discussed in those studies where they could not be avoided but such variation has rarely been the focus of systematic attention Differences between individual languages have been of great interest but these differences have not often been placed in a framework of systematic typological variation And although languages and their grammars change over time the focus of attention on the individual child learner has generally led to neglect of explanatory principles that are best found on the level of linguistic diachrony rather than the level of innate ideas or patterns of learning and cognition in the individual child The chapter authors seek to explore these neglected contexts in more depth
